ALLIES GRANT MOST OF THE CLAIMS MADE BY TURKEY

Foreign Ministers Send Proposals to Athens, Constantinople and Angora in the Effort to Establish Peace in Asia Minor.

MUCH TERRITORY WOULD BE RESTORED

Sultan Would Retain Constantinople and Have Sovereignty Over Asia Minor —Protection for Armenians Provided.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 27.—Turkey is conceded nearly all her claims, except those to Adrianople and part of Eastern Thrace, in the memorandum which the allied Foreign Ministers today forwarded to Athens, Angora and Constantinople with a view to its acceptance as a preliminary peace settlement, revising the treaty of Sevres.

The Enos-Midia line in Thrace is modified so as to give Turkey more territory on the Bulgarian frontier, but the old Turkish capital of Adrianople is excluded.

Constantinople remains Turkey's, and she retains Armenia, with the population under League of Nations protection, but she loses the Gallipoli Peninsula and Mesopotamia.

The Foreign Ministers give the Greek and Turkish belligerents three weeks in which to reply to the proposed terms.

The features of the preliminaries to peace proposed to Greece and the Turks by the Foreign Ministers are:

Perpetual freedom of navigation of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus.

Turkish sovereignty over all of Asia Minor and all of the territory bounded by the Caucasus, Persia, Mesopotamia and the Mediterranean and Aegean Seas.

Protection for Armenians.

The Armenians to be under the protection of the League of Nations, but the territory inhabited by them to be under the sovereignty of Turkey, with an eventual national home to be found for them by the league.

Adrianople to go to the Greeks, but a large percentage of Thrace to be returned to Turkey.

The peninsula of Gallipoli to go to Greece.

The foreign ministers in their memorandum inform the belligerents that the desire of the allies is to re-establish peace and to re-establish the Turkish nation in the territories that are considered belonging to it, with Constantinople; to assure the Mussulman population of the most equitable regime; to give Greece compensation for the sacrifices she made in the war; to protect the racial minorities, and to prevent further wars between Turkey and the European Powers. To this the Ministers add:

"The people or the Government that would reject these propositions through prejudice assumes the responsibility for the continuation of the conflict."

The conclusions of Premier Poincare, Marquis Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, and Sig. Schanzer, the Italian Foreign Minister, are believed to mark a step toward the settlemen of a question which has been one of the roots of unrest in the Old World. The amicable offer of mediation between Turkey and Greece removes the dilemma facing the French of either taking a hostile attitude toward Turkey or breaking with the allies, and also removes the cloud created over Anglo-French relations by the Angora accord.

Negotiations Might Continue.

Should the Turkish Nationalist leaders find the proposed modifications of the Sevres treaty do not go far enough, it is pointed out that nothing has been done at Paris which would stand in the way of continuing the negotiations.

The authorities of Constantinople have already accepted the armistice proposal, made several days ago, and the Angora representatives, when told of the Foreign Minister's decision last night, did not hide their feeling of satisfaction.

Proposals to Be Discussed.

In connection with their proposal that the straits territory be demilitarized, the Ministers suggested that allied forces on the Gallipoli Pen-

EAST ST. LOUIS SENDS BILL FOR $36,031 TAXES ON BRIDGE

Assessment Made on Valuation of $450,000 on Portion of Free Bridge in That City.

City Comptroller Nolte today received a bill from A. P. Cholet, Town Collector of East St. Louis, for $36,031.50, said to be due the City of East St. Louis as taxes on the Municipal Bridge, for last year. The tax is due now.

The assessment is made on a valuation of $450,000, applying to that portion of the bridge which projects into East St. Louis. For 1920, the valuation was $300,000 and the assesment, $21,734.10. The present assessment is an increase of $14,297.40.

The City of St. Louis contested the first tax levied on the bridge, carrying the case to the Supreme Court of Illinois, which held that the East Side city was entitled to the tax. At that time the City Counselor and his assistants made the plea that East St. Louis benefited as much from the bridge as did St. Louis, and that in view of this, an assesment should not be made against the bridge.

BODY OF WORKMAN IS FOUND IN TERMINAL ROUNDHOUSE PIT

How Edward Rodemich, 27, Got Into Water-Filled Fire Dump Not Determined.

The body of Edward Rodemich, 27, of 1929A North Market street, was taken from a water-filled, 16-foot pit in the Terminal Association roundhouse at Hall street and Bremen avenue today at 3 a. m. The pit is used to dump the fires of incoming locomotives.

How Rodemich got into the pit has not been learned, the police say. He was employed at the roundhouse. After his coat and torch had been found beside the pit a search of the roundhouse was made. City firemen then dragged the pit and the body was found.

ROOSTER DECIDES THE ISSUE IN NEGRO CHICKEN DISPUTE

By the Associated Press.

WILSON, N. C., March 27.—Mayor Killette, called on in City Court here to enact the role of Solomon in a case involving ownership of a large dominicker rooster, settled the question and at the same time proved the adage that "chickens come home to roost."

Liler Thomas, negro, swore out a warrant charging Annie Graham, also a negro, with stealing the rooster.

The Mayor, recalling that chickens were reputed to "come home to roost," decreed that at sundown the dominicker be placed midway between the homes. The rooster, thus given the choice, ended the dispute by selecting Liler's chicken house and setting comfortably on the apparently familiar roost.

30-FOOT FALL FATAL TO MAN

Mathew Viskovich, 52, of 1915 La Salle street, a painter, died at the city hospital yesterday of injuries suffered last Wednesday, when he fell 30 feet from a scaffold on which he was at work at 2801 Cass avenue.

His injuries at the time were diagnosed as a fractured right arm. He is believed to have been hurt internally also.

Legless Robber Almost Escapes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 27.—Clarence J. Miles of St. Louis, a legless man, was arrested here today after he had thrown a brick through the window of the Armbruster jewelry store and taken diamond rings and other jewelry valued at $1000. Miles walks with crutches. He confessed that he robbed the store. He was arrested at the Illinois Central station as he waited for a train for St. Louis, and all the loot was recovered.

MRS. HARDING SEEKS BOY PRISONERS' RELEASE

President May Pardon Three Lads Serving Time on Postal Robbery Conviction.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Three boys, 7, 8 and 11 years old, serving five-year terms in a reform school for alleged burglary of a postoffice in West Virginia, soon will be returned to their parents through the intercession of Mrs. Warren G. Harding, it was learned today.

An investigation of their cases by the Department of Justice, which followed Mrs. Harding's intervention, disclosed an unusual set of circumstances which led to the imprisonments. Officers said today they never should have been sentenced, not alone because of their youth, but also because the evidence in their cases did not warrent conviction. They already have served about six months in the National Reform School here.

Bloodhound Evidence.

The lads are Andy Bergola, 7; Frank Bosko, 8, and Teddy Bosko, 11. Their parents live at Weirton, W. Va. They were tried in the Federal Court of Northern West Virginia before Judge Baker and were sentenced along with seven older boys, ranging in years up to 15.

The chief evidence against the youngsters, it is now shown, was provided by bloodhounds. The dogs, used by the police of Weirton, took up a scent at the point of the alleged robbery and tracked it through the woods to a settlement of steel workers. There the police gathered up the ten boys and on what is now said to have been circumstantial evidence, all were found guilty.

Third Degree Used on Them.

The Attorney-General's investigation shows that the three youngsters, along with the seven other alleged "desperadoes" as they were called by the District Attorney, were put through the third degree and that policemen at Weirton wrung confessions of guilt from the boys. The boys later denied their guilt and so pleaded.

Warren Martin, assistant to the Attorney-General, visited the lads, investigated the facts, and declared that steps were being taken to return the boys to their parents. They probably will be pardoned by the President.

GOVERNMENT MOVES TO DISMISS SUIT AGAINST BILL POSTERS

Basis of Settlement of Action Under Anti-Trust Law Said to Have Been Reached.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The Government moved in the Supreme Court today to dismiss its case, brought under the Sherman anti-trust laws, against the Associated Bill Posters and Distributers of the United States and Canada.

A basis of settlement satisfactory to the Government had been reached, it was said.

LONDON, March 27.—Reports received at Copenhagen, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from the Danish capital, say the leaders of the Russian soviet government have been summoned to Moscow to consider the situation which may arise in the event of the death of Nikolai Lenine, the Premier, which is said to be regarded as a possibility in the near future.

PILOT OF FLYING BOAT, CONSCIOUS, TALKS OF TRAGEDY

Robert Moore, Recovered From Delirium, Gives Details Differing in Part From Those of Saturday.

A. J. BULTE KILLED ON THE FIRST DAY

Former St. Louis Man One of First Victims Instead of Last Survivor Among Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., March 27.—Complete details of the loss of the flying boat Miss Miami with five passengers were given last night by Pilot Robert Moore from his bed in a local hospital where he is slowly recovering from the effects of his 55-hour fight against thirst, starvation and the dangers of the gulf stream.

Moore had thrown off entirely the delirium from which he was suffering when picked up Saturday by the tanker William Green, but the attending physicians said there was grave danger of development of pneumonia from his exhausted condition and prolonged exposure.

(The story told by Moore now that he is completely conscious differs in many particulars from reports of his story as related Saturday, when he was intermittently delirious.)

While the pilot, still shaken with horror of his experience, told his story, crews of seaplane and naval craft were returning from a fruitless all-day search for the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. August Bulte and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Smith of Kansas City and Mrs. J. S. Dickson of Memphis, who had occupied the passenger pit of the Miss Miami when she took off Wednesday morning supposedly for a 40-minute flight to the Island of Bimini. The search was continued today.

Near Bimini When Disabled.

"We left Miami," said Moore, "at 11:04 o'clock last Wednesday morning in the face of a stiff northeasterly wind. At 11:41, about three minutes out of Bimini, something broke off the propeller. I automatically looked for a ship, or a shoal, to land by. I saw a fishing smack and volplaned down to the water about a mile away in its course.

"I asked the passengers not to be afraid. We were in no immediate danger and the craft was drawing near. The winds, however, were rising, and before long the hull of our boat sprang a leak. The nose of the plane began rising. Then a big wave came along and lifted us. The plane turned over and we were all thrown into the sea.

"Mrs. Bulte came to the surface first, then Mr. Smith and Mrs. Smith. Of the three none could swim. I succeeded in getting them to the overturned plane. Mrs. Dickson and Mr. Bulte had not appeared on the surface.

"Mrs. Bulte made this discovery.

"'My God, my husband, where is he?' she cried.

"I told her he would be all right in a few minutes, and dived into the waters, but I could not locate either him or Mrs. Dickson. Mrs. Bulte began to weep. I dived into the water and obtained cushions from the plane to use for life preservers. As I returned to them, I saw the body of Bulte floating. I stepped directly in front of Mrs. Bulte and obstructed her view. As the body passed me, I noted a wound on his forehead. He must have been killed before he struck the water, when the plane overturned.

Expected to Be Rescued.

"Within the next 30 minutes the scenes changed twice. On the horizon we sighted the fishing boat. We began to laugh, and contemplated being picked up. I was confident we would be saved. In fact, I felt like whistling. I believe I did. It kept up my morale.

"And the fishing boat changed its course.

"I can't understand in God's world why he did not keep on towards us. He knew I was in that locality somewhere, for he had seen me come down. I could see his name on the boat, less than half a mile away, as he went on."

"The winds rose during the night and the women grew weaker. At least 12 times they were swept over, but I swam out and got them and brought them back each time.

"The next day our hopes rose as we saw other boats pass, but none came within less than a mile and one-half of us. I tried to keep up the morale of the others by telling them they were soldiers. It helped

FEDERAL GRAND JURY TO TAKE UP OKMULGEE BANK FAILURE

Case That in Which Gov. Robertson and Others Were Indicted in State Court.

By the Associated Press.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., March 27.—The Federal grand jury, which was convened today, will investigate the failure of the Bank of Commerce at Okmulgee, United States Attorney Lee announced after the jury had been discharged by Federal Judge Robert L. Williams.

A State court grand jury investigation at Okmulgee into the defunct bank's affairs has already resulted in the return of indictments against Gov. J. B. A. Robertson of Oklahoma, Fred G. Dennis, former State Bank Commissioner, and others.

District Attorney Lee announced at the same time that the grand jury also would be called upon to inquire into activities of the Ku Klux Klan and the "so-called Riders of the Night."

BELL CO. PLANS HIGHER RATES ON BUSINESS PHONES

Applies for Increases to Meet Added Expenses It Says It Will Have When It Absobs Kinloch.

MERGER ABOUT 18 MONTHS HENCE

Hearing Set for April 13 at City Hall on Proposed Schedule — Direct Line Would Go Up $1.

Application for permission to increase business telephone rates in St. Louis, to cover an increased operating cost of $531,500 annually, which the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. says it will face when it absorbs the Kinloch Long Distance Co., 15 months hence, was filed with the Public Service Commission at Jefferson City today.

The commission set the application for hearing at the city hall here April 13 at 10 a. m.

The application points out that the Bell company must expend $1,500,000 to connect Kinloch exchanges with its own and avers that this cost, in addition to the excess cost at which the consolidated properties will operate, justifies the increase sought.

Proposed Changes in Rates.

The rates proposed in the application filed today follow:

Direct business lines increased from $13 to $14 per month. Extensions, $1.50, unchanged.

Measured business service, changed from $4 for 67 outgoing calls to $6 for 100 outgoing calls.

Trunk lines for private branch exchanges, increased from $31 per month for each of first two lines to $35. Each additional trunk line from $14 to $16. Individual stations from $1 to $1.25.

The Bell rate is a considerable increase over the present Kinloch business rate of $7 for a wall telephone and $7.50 for a desk telephone.

Residence Rates.

Bell residence rates will be unchanged but present Kinloch residence rates are lower than those of the absorbing company and will be increased to the present Bell residence rates, now $4.50 for a single party line, $3.75 for a two-party line; and $3 for a four-party line. Extensions are $1.

Kinloch residence rates are $4 for a direct line, $3.25 for a two-party line and $2.50 for a four-party line.

The application sets forth that the consolidation of the companies will result in a unified service and will effect a general saving where two telephones are now maintained. The merger will remove about 17,000 telephones which are duplications.

Property to Be Taken Over.

The value of the Kinloch properties acquired by the Bell is in excess of $10,000,000, the application states. It includes 21 exchanges, 27 switchboards and 7 buildings which afford local service to more than 50,500 subscribers.

The total outstanding stocks of the Kinloch Long Distance Co. and its four subsidiaries is set at $7,577,300. The Kinloch Telephone Co., the Suburban Telephone Co., the Sedalia Home Telephone Co. and the Kinloch Building Co. are the subsidiary companies.

The application shows that under the merger plan the Bell acquires the Kinloch properties for a consideration of $4,200,000 in 7 per cent preferred stock, $140,000 in cash and the assumption of Kinloch bonds and other indebtedness totaling approximately $5,500,000.

Exchange of Stock.

The $4,200,000 in Bell stock was exchanged for $2,800,000 Kinloch Long Distance Telephone Co. common stock and $1,400,000 in Government and other securities which the Kinloch company holds.

Bell engineers are now surveying the property of the Kinloch and preparing to connect the Kinloch exchanges with those of the Bell. This work will consume more than a year, officials of the company say, and will cost $1,500,000.

$1200 PAYROLL TAKEN IN HOLDUP OF FACTORY OFFICE

Three Armed Robbers Appear When John B. Holman Is Dictating Letter to Stenographer and Force Them and Secretary of Box Concern to Lie on Floor.

SECRETARY MADE TO OPEN SAFE

Robbers Not Seen by Anyone at Establishment at 316 Clark Avenue, but Fourth Man Is Said to Have Had Auto Waiting.

John B. Holman of 3936 Westminster place, president of the Holman Paper Box Co.; George R. Blackford of 5160 Kensington avenue, secretary of the company, and Miss Lillian Rosenfelder of 3725A Wyoming street, stenographer, were held up in the company5s office, 316 Clark avenue, at 2:20 this afternoon, by three men, who took $1210, payroll money, from the safe.

Holman was dictating a letter to the stenographer, when the young woman screamed, and Holman looked up to see a man pointing a revolver at him. The man wore a black handkerchief over the lower part of his face.

"Lie down on the floor and we won't hurt you," the man said. Two other men, similarly masked, were seen to be pointing revolvers at Miss Rosenfelder, and at Blackford, who was in the office at the time. The command was repeated to them.

Holman did not lie down so quickly as was desired, and the man who was threatening him pushed him over, causing Holman's head to strike the framework of an adding machine. He was bruised, but not seriously hurt. He is 68 years old.

After the three had lain down on the floor, the robbers tried the safe and found it locked. They jerked Blackford to his feet and ordered him to open the safe "in a hurry." When the safe was opened, they took the payroll money, which hda been placed there less than an hour before. Then they hurrie dout.

No one in the Holman establishment saw the arrival or departure of the robbers, but persons across the street said they came and went in a Studebaker touring car, which a fourth man kept in readiness for them.

It was stated that the Holman Co. was fully insured against the loss.

46 GERMANS KILLED AND 109 WOUNDED EACH HOUR OF WAR

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 27.

FORTY-SIX men were killed and 109 wounded on the German side during every hour the World War was raging, according to an estimate arrived at by Gen. von Altrock, a statistician. This estimate was made from a study of official records.

Germany's losses totaled in dead 1,808,545 and in wounded 4,246,779. Men to the number of 13,000,000 were under arms during the course of the war, of whom about one in seven was killed in battle.

The officers' corps lost 53,000 men killed and 96,000 wounded. German soldier and civilian losses through death, caused directly or indirectly by the war, are estimated by Gen. von Altrock at 12,000,000.

$4000 IN LIBERTY BONDS OVERLOOKED BY HOLDUP MEN

Three Men in Auto Stop Messenger and Official of Clayton Bank on Road in County and Search Them.

Four thousand dollars in Liberty bonds, tucked away in an inside vest pocket of the vest of Roy Fick, messenger for the St. Louis County Bank of Clayton, were overlooked by three robbers who held up Fick and David Schmid, vice president of the bank, at Forsythe boulevard and Pennsylvania avenue at 10:30 a. m. today.

Half an hour later Rudolph A. Goertz, a collector for the Automobile Gasoline Co., 4605 Washington boulevard, reported he had been robbed of $600 in currency and checks by three men on Clayton road, at a point about a mile west of the city limits, and about a mile sonthwest of the scene of the other holdup.

Forced Against Curb.

Fick and David Schmid, vice president of the bank, on their way to a downtown bank, were riding east on Forsythe boulevard in an automobile driven by Schmid. As they crossed Pennsylvania avenue they were overtaken by a touring car occupied by three men, who, they observed, had followed them from Clayton. They were ordered to pull to the curb at the side of Francis Field by one of the men after he and his companions had drawn revolvers.

Schmid and Fick were then ordered to get out of their car, and although there is considerable traffic on Forsythe boulevard at that point, the robbers in a leisurely manner began feeling the pockets of the two men.

"Where you got the money?" demanded one of the robbers of Schmid.

"I've got only a few dollars," replied Schmid.

The robber took Schmid's money and after feeling the outside of Fick's pockets, and failing to find the bonds, searched the automobile while one of his companions kept the two men covered with a revolver. The robbers then got into their car and drove east on Forsythe boulevard. Schmid and Fick said they did not see any license tag on the automobile.

Story of Holdup Told by Oil Company Collector.

Goertz said that he was driving east on Clayton road at 10:50 a. m., when three men in an automobile westbound ordered him to pull to the side of the road. One of the men pointed a revolver at him, he said, and a second man took his grip containing the collections from the seat in Goertz's automobile. The robbers then drove east in the Clayton road and entered the city. Goertz was unable to say how much of his collections was in cash.

FOUR AUTOS RUN INTO ONE TRAFFIC SIGNAL POST IN DAY

Standard at Twelfth and Locust Streets Has a Bad Sunday.

A red signal post for direction of traffic, standing in the west half of Twelfth street just north of Locust, had a bad Sunday. Now it is in the lamp post hospital.

It began in the wee, sma' hours yesterday, when a machine driven by James A. Brown of East St. Louis, struck the post and broke the red globe on top. A taxicab operated by Harry Berliner of 1922 Semple avenue came along a couple of hours later and snapped the post off at the base.

The police put a red lantern in as substitute last night and at 3 p. m. that was demolished by the car of Edward Loevenhart of 4915 Argyle place. A machine driven by George Weshos of East St. Louis took a chip off the concrete base at midnight.

A similar post at the southeast side of this intersection was demolished in a series of collisions recently and has just been replaced.

TEX RICKARD ON STAND AT HIS TRIAL ON GIRL'S CHARGES

He Appears After Wife Testifies He Was at Home at Time Attack Is Alleged to Have Taken Place.

REX BEACH CHARACTER WITNESS FOR HIM

Novelist Declares Sports Promoter Was Known in Alaska as Being on the Square.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Tex Rickard took the stand in his own defense today in his trial on a charge of assaulting a 15-year-old school girl, Sarah Schoenfeld.

Rickard began his testimony by telling of his past experiences as a Texas cattle driver and as a participant in the Alaska and Nevada gold rushes. He admitted he had operated gambling houses in several places, but asserted that one of his strictest rules in every place he owner was that unescorted women should not be permitted to enter.

He declared that he had never employed women in gambling houses and did not believe they were necessary, even during the rather wild days in Alaska.

Mrs. May Rickard previously took the stand in defense of her husband and testified that the sport promoter was at home from about 7 to 8 p. m. on Nov. 12, the night the assault is alleged to have been made in a West Forty-seventh street apartment. Prosecution witnesses previously had testified that Rickard met the girl at 7:30.

Pale and haggard as if from a long illness, Mrs. Rickard entered the courtroom with all eyes turned on her. She was dressed simply. She smiled once to Rickard. After that she did not glance at him again, but let her gaze wander about the courtroom. Her husband sat with his eyes glued on her, as they have been on every witness who has been called.

Mrs. Rickard testified she had been ill Nov. 12, when several guests had been invited to dinner. She said her husband had come home as usual about 6:30 or 7, and that after dinner he had come to her room. That, she thought, was about 8 o'clock.

The State, in cross-examination, asked her only one question: "You were quite ill that day, weren't you?"

"Yes," she replied.

Rex Beach testified that Rickard was known in Alaska as being on the square.

Beach said he had known Rickard 24 years. Rickard ran a gambling house in Alaska in which the novelist said he never had heard of anything crooked happening.

Asked some hypothetical questions on whether he thought gambling honorable, Beach said that at that time gambling in the Far North was not against the law, and whether the business was honorable was dependent on whether it was run on the level.

The next character witness was Charles E. Herron, who described himself as miner, fisherman and publisher of the Anchorage (Alaska) Daily Times.

He also stated that Rickard had a good reputation in the northland. As to the ethics of gambling, the witness said he now abhorred it, but that when the gold rush was on, everyone did it and no one thought anything about it.

The symposium on gambling was continued when Maj. J. Drexel Biddle of Philadelphia, for 14 years leader in the Bible class movement, testified that he knew nothing against Rickard's character.

After he had stated that he had met the promoter in Toledo on the day of the Dempsey-Willard fight, he was asked what he thought of gambling. He replied:

"I consider that a man who ran a gambling house in the day of the gold rush may have been an honorable man."

Asked if he taught gambling in his Bible classes, he answered: "I have never made gambling the thesis of an argument."

Deputy Sheriff Thomas Burke was suspended today for escorting Rickard outside the Tombs yesterday. Rickard, it was said, had permission to meet his counsel in the presence of a Sheriff's deputy, but Burke is said to have taken the prisoner out to luncheon.

"We weathered the storm of Wednesday night after a terrible experience and Mrs. Bulte died Thursday. I saw Mr. and Mrs. Smith clasped in each other's arms and one of them suggested that they close their eyes and jump overboard. But they didn't, and Mrs. Smith died in her husband's arms. We released the bodies of the two women and they floated away.

Thursday, as dusk approached, Smith grew delirious and I strapped him on. At times he appeared rational, and asked what chance I thought we had of being rescued. I told him I thought we would yet be saved, and he said:

"'I don't see how we can hold out much longer. Don't you think I had a brave wife?' I assured him that I had never seen a more courageous woman.

Leaves Message for Sons.

"'All right, Bob,' he answered, 'promise that if you return you will tell her sons how brave their mother was. Tell them the facts and tell them the truth about me. You will know as no other how I died. Tell them for me, boy.'

"He removed three dollar bills from his pocket and asked me to give one to each of his boys with his dying message.

"I pushed his body into the sea and all alone kept up my courage as best I could. The sun's heat had blistered me and the thirst was maddening. I chewed the ends of my fingers until blood came to appease my thirst. I saw boats pass and waved to them, but none saw me. As dusk approached Friday night, I began to believe that it was all up. I tied a rope to my neck, but I was so weak that it seemed there wasn't much use. I guess I was unconscious when the boat came after me for I don't remember much more."

ALLIES GRANT MOST OF THE CLAIMS MADE BY TURKEY

insula and allied military inspectors be charged with the task of enforcing the measures. The proposals are to be submitted to the interested parties, who will be invited to send representatives to a city to be chosen later, within three weeks. These representatives will be assisted by the British, Italian and French High Commissioners in Constantinople.

It is recognized by the Ministers that the financial independence of Turkey must in large measure be respected, and that, if compelled to bear the burden entailed by her entry into the war beside the Central Powers, Turkey's financial capacity demands that a fixed indemnity only be imposed.

No Financial Control.

The Ministers decided that the Ottoman public debt administration should be maintained and that, except for certain measures for the protection of allied economic interests, no financial control be placed over Turkey.

Measures to modify the situation that exists by reason of the treaties, called capitulations, without compromising the rights and interests of foreigners in Turkey were also studied by the Ministers. Under these capitulations the subjects of Western Powers resident in Turkey enjoy ex-territorial privileges.

The Greek Government has accepted the proposal for an armistice between Greece and the Turkish Nationalists. The reply to the proposal of the Ministers, however, contains technical reservations of the military conditions.

LUMBER DECREE CHANGE SOUGHT

Modification of Order as to Exchange of Prices Asked For.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Counsel for the American Column and Lumber Co. filed a motion in the Supreme Court today asking that a decree of the court, in the so-called Hardwood Lumber case be modified so that the injunction against the exchange of information about prices and stock will only be effective when such information is used in connection with unlawful combinations.

ACCIDENT VERDICT IN CASE OF WOMAN KILLED ON AUTO RIDE

Laborer's Wife Fatally Hurt When Machine Driven by Married Man Hit Post on Viaduct.

DRIVER SAYS THEY MET IN DRUG STORE

Husband Says He Had Refused Her Permission to Stay Out All Night When She Telephoned.

A Coroner's verdict of accidental death was returned today in the case of Mrs. Lillian Miller, 19 years old, 2701A South Eleventh street, who died at the city hospital early yesterday. Her throat was cut by glass from a broken windshield when an automobile in which she was riding with Edward A. Gruender, president of the Automotive Electrical Service Co., 2129 Locust street, skidded into a light post on the Jefferson avenue viaduct over Papin street.

Mrs. Miller was the wife of Edward Miller, 20, a laborer. Gruender, who lives with his wife and two children at 1619 North Twentieth street, and who had been held under bond, was released after the inquest.

Although represented by counsel, Gruender insisted upon making a sworn statement at the inquest. His meeting Saturday night with Mrs. Miller, whom he knew casually, was a chance one and he was merely driving her home in the rain, he declared.

Tells of Meeting Women.

Gruender testified that he was trying out a touring car, which he was considering purchasing, Saturday night, with Dennis E. Sawyer, 1907 John avenue, when they met Mrs. Miller and Miss Grace Bronson at Grand avenue and Olive street, after the men had stopped to buy cigars. After a few minutes' conversation, Mrs. Miller left to call her husband and ask him to allow her to spend the night with Miss Bronson. When she returned and said her husband wished her to come home, Gruender said he and Sawyer offered to drive them home, as it was raining.

Miss Bronson, who lives in the 2100 block on North Grand avenue, left the car with Sawyer near her home and Gruender and Mrs. Miller rode on, the latter directing the way because he did not know where she lived, Gruender said.

Machine Hit Light Post.

As they were driving over the Jefferson avenue viaduct, Gruender attempted to turn to the right to give more room to a Ford car coming north. His machine skidded on the slippery wooden paving blocks, the rear of the automobile hit the curbing, and the front end was then swung with such force against a light post that the windshield was broken.

They were thrown forward in the seat, Gruender said, but he did not believe at first that Mrs. Miller was injured. When he asked her if she was hurt, she replied, "Yes. Badly."

By that time several persons had run up and Dr. James Glascock had Mrs. Miller placed in another car and taken to Jefferson and Chouteau avenues, where an ambulance arrived to take her to the hospital.

Dr. Glascock testified that he found a heavy piece of bloodstained glass, about four by six inches, from the windshield, in the car after the accident.

Mrs. Miller was not identified at the city hospital until the police found her husband, as Gruender knew her only as Mrs. Miller and did not know her address. Gruender said he had become slightly acquainted with her through seeing her frequently at luncheon at a restaurant at Olive street and Jefferson avenue.

Phoned About Staying Out.

Miller said his wife spoke to him of knowing Gruender about a year ago, when she was employed in a dentist's office. He thought the acquaintance had been made through Mrs. Sawyer, who was a patient of the dentist. His wife was not accustomed to going out alone at night, Miller declared, and did not object when he told her to return home after the telephone call Saturday night.

Miller said Gruender told him at the city hospital that he had never been out with his wife before and that he was simply driving her home when the accident happened.

SPECIAL ELECTION TOMORROW ON TAX RATE FOR SCHOOLS

Only Proposition to Be Voted on Is Keeping the 85-Cent Rate, or Letting It Go Back to 60 Cents.

POLLS TO BE OPEN FROM 6 A. M. TO 7 P. M.

Taxpayers, Who Are Registered Voters, May Ballot—Rate Will Be Set for Four Years.

The 609 polling places of the city will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. tomorrow for the vote on the proposal to maintain the school tax at the present rate of 85 cents on the $100 valuation for the next four years. Only taxpaying voters may cast ballots.

A taxpayer is one who regularly pays general (real or personal) taxes, a merchants' and manufacturers' tax or State income tax; where both State and city taxes are assessed against a man and his wife jointly, both are taxpayers. The usual registration requirements prevail for this election.

Nothing but this proposal will be considered, the election being a special one. To vote in favor of the proposal, which will be printed on the ballot, scratch the "No" and leave the "Yes." Reverse this procedure to vote against the proposal.

Voters who are not sure of the location of their polling places may be informed by calling on the principal of the nearest public school, who will determine the proper precinct.

Rate to Be Set for Four Years.

The school tax would revert to the basic rate of 60 cents should the proposal fail of passage by a majority vote, and this rate would prevail for four years. Heretofore it has been possible to obtain a rate higher than the basic one by an election annually, and this was done, but the Legislature has changed the law since the people voted the 85-cent rate last April.

Mayor Kiel, in a proclamation issued today, asks that employers give workers time to go to the polls. He asked the heads of all city departments to close their offices at 1 p. m. to allow city employes to vote.

"The public school system of the United States is the greatest agency for the perpetuation of a republican form of government, as well as being the greatest Americanization factor in the land," Mayor Kiel states. "I believe it is incumbent upon all good citizens at every opportunity to show their appreciation of the public schools of the country."

Auto Parade of Women.

The League of Women Voters will conduct an automobile parade, starting from Grand avenue and Pine street at 11 a. m. tomorrow, in support of the proposal. The machines in the parade, which will be decorated and carry school tax banners, will first gather at Soldan, Yeatman and Cleveland high schools at 10 a. m. and at Central High School at 10:30 a. m. Organizations and individuals are invited to take part. The parade will move east into the downtown business streets and end at noon in the Federal Building, where parking space will be provided, and where speakers will urge votes for the tax. The Republican Women's Club will carry women voters to the polls in machines in many precincts.

School officials and members of the Citizens' School Tax Committee, which has conducted a campaign for support of the proposal, declare that the issue tomorrow involves the future of the public schools and of the rising generation. They say that failure of the proposal would be calamitous. The present rate must be kept, it is explained, in order to maintain the high standard of the St. Louis schools and to provide needed school buildings and allow the continuation of the present wide use of the schools as community centers.

DEMOCRATS AGAIN ASSAIL LODGE FOR TREATY TANGLE

Hitchcock Says President and Hughes Differ on Supplements—Lodge Offers Solution.

MOTION TO AMEND SUPPLEMENT LOST

Senator Robinson Criticises Ambassador Geddes and Hoover for Urging Ratification in California.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—By a vote of 29 to 53, the Senate refused today to amend the four-Power supplemental treaty so as to exclude the Japanese Island of Sakhalin from the scope of the four-Power arrangement.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—A new way out of the four-Power treaty tangle was suggested in the Senate today by administration leaders and criticised as inadequate and ineffective by the treaty's opponents.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the Republican leader, declared on the Senate floor that the best solution of the situation occurring to him was to include in the resolution ratifying the formal supplementary agreement a resolution restating the informal "declaration" signed coincidentally with the treaty. It was because of the Senate's failure to act specifically on this informal supplement that the treaty opponents had challenged the validity of Friday's ratification of the pact itself.

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, who first raised the question as to the Senate's action on the supplement, renewed in the Senate today his charges that the administration leaders had obscured the whole situation with "doubts, inconsistencies, and uncertainties." He declared he saw no real remedy now, because the treaty with its supplement had already been returned to the White House by the secretary of the Senate.

Cites Difference of Opinion.

A "radical difference" between President Harding and Secretary Hughes as to the nature of the supplement was shown, Hitchcock said, by the fact that Hughes in making his report as head of the American delegation said there were "six treaties" to be ratified while President Harding in laying the same agreements before the Senate described them as "seven treaties."

Senator Stanley, Democrat, of Kentucky, suggested that no similar situation had developed since "the days we used to go to the country fair and observe the little green pea."

"Now the President sees it," said Senator Stanley, "and now the Secretary of State don't see it. Now the Senator from Massachusetts says the supplement protects our interests fully and now the Senator from Missouri (Spencer) tells us it is not binding and is only the individual, unofficial expression of the delegates. I wish one of them would tell us whether these delegates deliberately refrained from giving it the status of a treaty so as to hand the unsuspecting public a gold brick. If that were true, it borders on duplicity, if not on perfidy."

Predicts "Endless Uncertainty."

Declaring while he was ready to vote for a separate resolution of ratification giving Senate approval to the supplement, Senator Hitchcock told the Republican leaders that such a solution would be only a subterfuge which would lead in the future to endless uncertainty and controversy over the very issues which are the most dangerous to peace in the Pacific.

Senators Simmons, Democrat, of North Carolina, and Harrison, Democrat, of Mississippi, joined in the criticism of the course of administration leaders.

British Ambassador Geddes and Secretary Hoover were criticised by Senator Robinson for what he declared was an attempt to mold public opinion by speaking in California in favor of ratification of the four-Power treaty.

France Will Approve "No Alliance" Feature Adopted by U. S. Senate.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 27.—The French Government will approve of adoption by the French Parliament of the "no alliance" reservation to the four-Power Pacific treaty adopted by the United States Senate, it was stated today in official circles.

LOUIS F. SWIFT, IN JAIL 4 HOURS, DENIES HE WAS DRUNK

Packer's Son Arrested After Accident for Driving Automobile While Intoxicated.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Louis F. Swift Jr. of Lake Forest, Ill., son of the packer, passed four hours in the Evanston (Ill.) jail yesterday charged with driving his automobile while intoxicated. His arrest, followed a collision early in the morning between his machine and another car in which four Evanston high school boys were riding. William Swift, a brother, obtained the young man's release on bonds of $200.

With Swift in the car were Mrs. William A. Swift and Miss Elizabeth Chase, both prominent in society.

Police said they found two bottles of liquor near the scene of the accident and a revolver and two clips of bullets in Swift's car. Swift last night issued the following statement: "I was not intoxicated. I was going to my home in Lake Forest. It was raining and snowing and the streets were very slippery. It was an unusually bad night. The accident was unavoidable."

THREE MEXICANS AND NEGRESS ARE CHARGED WITH MURDER

Springfield (Ill.) Police Obtain Warrants Following Attacks on the Streets.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 27.—In the arrest of three Mexicans and the negro wife of one, Springfield police believe they have the solution of recent murders in which the victims have been slugged, robbed and left dying on streets in the heart of the city's business section.

J. W. Ogden of Sterling, Ill., and Cirilio Navarro, an Italian, were victims of the slayings within the last two weeks and never regained consciousness after they were found.

The first of the mysterious assaults occurred Feb. 28, when J. B. Pillsbury of Petersburg, Ill., was found beaten to unconsciousness with his pockets turned inside out. He is still in a hospital.

Warrants charging them with the murder of Navarro were read to Emogeda Domino Crisbo and Joe Grungo last night after an all-day grilling by the police. Alice Ogeda, negress, whom Ogeda claims as his wife, was charged with being an accessory to the murder. Stolen silks and jewelry have been traced to the Mexicans and the negress, according to the police, who said clews to the murders were uncovered through discovery of the traffic in stolen merchandise.

85 PER CENT OF CRIME FOR HALF YEAR LAID TO NEW OFFENDERS

President of Prisoners' Relief Society Says All Sections Are Touched by Crime Wave.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Only 14 per cent of the crimes registered by civil authorities in the last six months can be attributed to previous offenders, according to E. E. Dudding, president of the Prisoners' Relief Society. Based on statistics which, he said, had been obtained from official prison records, Dudding estimated that 86 per cent of those definitely connected with crime in the past half year have been new offenders.

"Some are wealthy and commit the crime without hope of gain," he said. "The crime wave has touched all sections of the country; no zone has been immune. Shout as you will against the ex-convict, he is better than you give him credit for being, and that with only the slim chance he has when he is released from the correctional institution."

Tennis Champion's Home Robbed.

A burglar who entered the home of Ted Drewes, municipal tennis champion, at Kenwood Springs, between 8 and 10 p. m. Saturday, took $700 worth of jewelry from a dresser and left several hundred dollars' worth of tennis trophies, which he evidently judged too heavy to carry or too hard to dispose of.

MORALITY SURVEY IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS URGED

Ministerial Alliance Adopts Resolution Asking Governor to Appoint Investigators.

A resolution calling on Gov. Hyde to appoint a representative committee to investigate conditions "affecting the moral welfare of the young people in our public schools, to make such recommendations as in their judgment are warranted by their findings," was unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Ministerial Alliance of St. Louis, held today at the Y. W. C. A.

The resolution was introduced by the Rev. William B. Lampe, pastor of the West Presbyterian Church, after Dr. Lampe, when the speaker of the day was being introduced, asked that this be halted and that some consideration be given by the ministers to "this Miller matter." He was made chairman of a committee of three to draft the resolution and present it. The other members are the Rev. Frank W. Sneed, pastor of the Compton and Washington Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Marvin T. Haw, presiding elder of the M. E. Church, South.

The resolution bears on the charge made by Victor J. Miller, president of the Police Board, that an immoral club of boys existed at Soldan High School and that he had been reliably informed such a club of girls also was existent in the schools.

Following passage of the resolution, the Rev. Mr. Sneed asked each minister to write to Gov. Hyde, asking him to suspend judgment regarding Miller's remarks. He said he knows Gov. Hyde now is summoning representative St. Louisans to Jefferson City, and that the Governor is being influenced by what he is being told.

"Investigation Imperative."

The Rev. Mr. Sneed stated that he knows several of the men who have been called to the Governor's mansion. He considered it imperative that people of St. Louis know just what conditions are among students at public schools, so, if need be, some steps may be taken to remedy them.

When the presiding minister asked if anyone present wished to discuss the resolution, there was no response. The ministers applauded Dr. Lampe after the resolution had been voted.

UPPER MISSISSIPPI NOT CAUSING FLOOD

Ohio River Contributing Greater Volume of Water to Lower Section of Stream.

The Upper Mississippi River, with a stage at St. Louis today of 23.4 feet, and an expected rise of 1½ feet in the next few days, will have no effect on the lower river flood, in the opinion of Forecaster Hayes.

The Ohio, which is contributing the greater volume to the Lower Mississippi, has reached its crest at Cairo, and, unless there are additional heavy rains, will have fallen sufficiently to enable the Lower Mississippi to carry off the water from the Upper Mississippi without converting it from a falling to a rising stage.

The Mississippi at St. Louis lacks 4½ feet of being bankful. The only river in this district that is at flood stage is the Illinois, and as it is a "flat" river, with a slow current, it is held back by the Mississippi, and its waters are carried away so gradually by the latter that its effect on the Mississippi will be almost nothing.

The Ohio at Cairo has been at a standstill at 53.6 feet since Saturday night and, in the absence of heavy rains, is expected to remain about stationary for two or three days.

The river at Memphis stood early today at 41.3 feet, a rise of half a foot in 24 hours. It will continue to rise, at a diminishing rate, until the crest now at Cairo reaches there.

Levees at all points below Memphis are reported holding well. The levees are patrolled by mounted men and forces of men are assembled at points from which they can be moved to threatened breaks.

FARRINGTON TO MEET OPERATORS

Illinois Coal Miners' Leader to Attend Conference in Chicago Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 27.—Acting on his promise to coal operators, President Frank Farrington of the Illinois Union Miners, this morning wired presidents of three coal operators' associations of Illinois that he would meet them in conference at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning in Chicago. Heads of the operators' association later accepted the invitation.

When asked if this conference might result in a separate wage scale for Illinois miners, Farrington said, "Not at this time, I believe."

JEWELL SAYS KEEP UP WAGES EVEN AT COST OF PROFITS

Railroad Board Urged to Maintain Costs and Wages by All Means as Solution of Conflict.

FIGHT AGAINST PAY REDUCTIONS OPENED

Declares Law of Supply and Demand Won't Give Living Wage Under Modern Business Principles.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Characterizing the present principles of wage adjustment as unjust, B. M. Jewell, president of the Railroad Employes' Department of the American Federation of Labor, told the Railroad Labor Board today that costs and wages should remain constant, even to the elimination of profits, and that until that economic basis was accepted, conflict between capital and labor would continue.

Jewell opened his fight against general wage reductions sought by 205 railroads before the board. He treated as irrelevant the carriers' argument of lower living costs and lower wages in other industries; he asserted "the so-called law of supply and demand will never afford a living wage" and declared for a living wage for all productive workers of the country.

Interest and profits must not continue while the workingman suffers low wages and unemployment, Jewell asserted, in presenting his theory of the living wage. A guarantee of steady earning power to the wage earner, even at the expense of immediate profits, he added, "would go far toward eliminating these recurrent periods of depression.

"Come With a Challenge."

"We have come here to challenge the justice of the wage rates of all productive labor, to challenge the very principle upon which the railroads propose that rates of pay be adjusted," said Jewell.

"We propose to show how the entire purpose for which industry is operated can and must be changed.

"The so-called law of supply and demand will never afford a living wage in a system organized, according to modern business principles. The existing wage scale is insufficient to enable the adult wage earner to maintain an ascertainable minimum of decent living due largely to an unfair division of the country's products.

"The railroads are saving to their employes, 'We cannot afford to pay a living wage, while we say that the railroad must pay at least that. The country must pay all productive workers a living wage.

"Profits Only Are Left."

"Out of the annual yield of any industry," Jewell continued, "three things are being paid, costs (including supplies, depreciation, extensions, taxation, etc.), wages and profits. Two of these, we say, ought to be constant, costs (reduced to an economical figure) and wages, at a level which will allow full human life, inclusive of art, literature, music, recreation and sociability, such as are enjoyed by the well-to-do. This leaves profits as the sole variable factor, and, frankly, contemplates a situation in which temporarily they may have to cease. Until the situation has been accepted the conflict between capital and labor will continue."

The union leader declared that the railroads, the steel corporations, equipment and supply companies had piled up a surplus of $1,287,607,647 in the war years from 1916 to 1920.

"These enormous funds are guaranteeing profit payment while the concerns operate to a very small proportion of capacity—in some instances, less than 30 per cent," Jewell continued.

"Yet, although much pity is voiced for the suffering due to unemployment, no voice is raised to suggest that the swollen profits of the past five years be paid back into the industry to save the employes from the terrors of such a period.

Arguments Are Continued.

"We feel that mere adjustment of wage rates to minute variations in the cost of living would be a purely statistical problem for the board's force, requiring no hearing or elaborate preparation on either side. If the board should interpret its function to be merely to determine the level of wage rates established in the outside labor market, it would thereby become a mere gauge and so defeat the purpose for which it was established."

The employes' argument for the six shop crafts, which are being considered separately at present will cover, Jewell said, an examination of the relation between railroad wages and wages in industry as a whole, and the cost of necessities of a healthy family life, an "exposition" of the forces fixing wages in the labor market, a study of the national income with a view to ascertaining whether industry can afford to pay a living wage, and a forecast of the effect on the country's prosperity resulting from payment of a living wage.

Women Warned of Swindle Schemes by Manager of Better Business Bureau

E. J. Brennan Tells Why Housewives and Widows Are Selected by Many Unscrupulous Promoters as Their Prey.

How the peculiar susceptibilities of women are being preyed upon by promoters of doubtful or fraudulent schemes and salesmen of hazardous, if not worthless stocks, was related today by E. J. Brennan, manager of the Better Business Bureau of the Advertising Club, in an address before the Women's Advertising Club.

Co-operative grocery chains, schemes whereby women in the home can make "pin" money after they have deposited a small sum, "buying clubs," and persistent, sympathetic salesmen aiming at insurance money, were among the women-catchers listed by Brennan. He also told of the appearance of women salesmen to add pulling power.

Some Women Salesmen.

"The female as a hunter in the field of commercial fraud is a comparatively new development," Brennan said. "St. Louis has had no outstanding example in recent years. During the past few years, however, one stock-selling concern with a branch office in St. Louis has used women sales people quite extensively and, because this company has predicated its sales argument on a false premise, it has done great harm, though the securities it has sold have not been fraudulent or even worthless. They have paid their preferential dividends but their value to the holder has declined considerably, often as much as 50 per cent. The person who paid $100, if he should need to convert the securities into cash, would have to take a material loss.

"The line between fraudulent and worthless securities is really not a line at all. However, it matters not to the investor whether he loses his money because of a crooked promoter or because the management of the company proved incapable and inexperienced. The result is the same—his money is gone forever. I often think the latter case is the more dangerous because the person who has been defrauded very often develops an antagonism to similar schemes, while the man whose money has been frittered away by well-meaning but overenthusiastic and inexperienced promoters is likely to excuse the happening and try again, only to get stung a second time.

"The typical stock saleswoman is an enthusiast, one who sways the emotions of her prospects often, if not always, to their ultimate undoing. I have in mind a mining proposition to which some St. Louis women contributed rather heavily several years ago. Today these same people are in the position of being between the devil and the deep sea. They do not know whether to listen to the plea of the promoters to put up more money to put the thing across, as they are told, or charge what they have put in to loss and utilize their experience as a lesson for the future.

Why Women Are Preyed On.

"And now to turn to the women as prey for the numerous propositions and schemes that make their appearance from day to day. Because of her position as manager of the home, the average woman seldom comes in contact with the intricacies of the business world, particularly the world of finance. This fact alone renders her peculiarly susceptible to the approach of the vendor of investments in schemes that have the appearance of soundness and of being substantial, but which are built on a false assumption or are economically unsound.

"Just by way of illustration, let us take the case of the various chain grocery store promotions that held the center of the stage but a year ago. Millions of dollars were thrown away in one such promotion in Chicago alone. The appeal in these was to the housewife, the manager of the family household expenditures. Here was the bait that induced many a woman to venture and lose a great part, if not all, of the family savings. By becoming a member at a cost of $25 per share, she could save money on her food expenditures. She could do this by getting a discount of 5 per cent on everything she bought at the company store.

"It looked good to her and she went into it, but she didn't stop to ask the question whether the grocery store could allow such a discount in addition to other special overhead expenses, and still make a profit. If she had, she would have found that statistics showed it couldn't be done. She didn't inquire into the former experience of the organizers. If she had, she would have found in the case of a similar company promoted in St. Louis that not one of the promoters had any experience in the grocery business other than from outside the counter. If she had investigated, she would have found that of the three promoters, two had been previously engaged in the sale of oil leases, leases that didn't make good the claims made for them.

Appeal Sometimes to Sympathy.

"It is not in investment schemes alone that women have been victimized. They have been the point of attack for the sale of subscriptions to magazines of doubtful merit. In such cases the appeal has been to their sympathy. They have been induced to spend money for home work schemes, propositions in which they were led to believe they could earn "pin" money or could aid in increasing the family savings. The lure of a home of her own with a yard for the children to play in, has led many a woman to put her money into ventures that looked safe, but were actually very hazardous.

"Only recently a St. Louis concern offered to pay women to make house dresses and such at home. It required a deposit of $5 to $10, which it represented as being a guarantee the materials would not be stolen. Some people, who responded to this, complained they sent their money, but failed to hear from the company. Others complained they received the materials, made them up and sent them back to the company, but that it returned them, alleging the workmanship was defective. These complaints reached the postoffice and a recent news item told of the head of this company being arrested on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

"It would be amazing if actual figures could be compiled on the amount of insurance money taken from widows by promoters and vendors of fraudulent and worthless securities. So great has this evil become that insurance companies are considering what to do to effectuate the actual purpose of insurance, namely, to provide for the support and maintenance of dependents.

Widows Easily Deceived.

"Present day Wallingfords, almost before the deceased husband and father is interred, get into touch with the widow and too often get her, inexperienced as she is in matters of investment, to put all she has into some security on which he makes a large commission and which, in last analysis, is worth not as much as the paper value of the stock certificate. Very few men leave an estate, including insurance, large enough so that the interest thereon equals the amount of their income when alive. This is why a distraught widow is peculiarly susceptible to the glittering promises of the stock salesman, who holds out the line of large dividends and who lies to her but does it so cleverly that she believes.

"In listing the schemes of which women are particular prey, the story would not be complete, if I failed to mention "buying clubs." The idea first started among certain men's tailors, who either found themselves unwilling or were unable to meet competition along regular lines. They evolved a scheme with an appeal to the "get-something-for-nothing" spirit of the human being. The game is to pay $1 a week for 50 weeks and at the end of that time get what is represented to be worth $50 worth of merchandise. In addition, each week a member is picked out and that person is given $50 worth of whatever she wants that the company has to sell. It is being worked in women's suits, furniture, jewelry, etc., in St. Louis right now.

"The answer is what is represented as being worth $50 is not. Some people who have complained to us recently allege it isn't worth half that sum. Complaints have been made to the Circuit Attorney, but the only law that would seem to be being violated is the lottery statite, but he holds it is not a lottery, because there is no drawing. He is right, but day by day people are being "skinned." Of course it is their own fault. They are getting what all people get when they try to get something for nothing or very little. They get 'stung' and the greater the apparent bargain, the greater the 'stinging.' There are such things as bargains, but when an unknown or slightly known dealer offers something much cheaper than reputable and long-established concern can sell it for, look out. There's a catch in it somewhere."

SAFE IN SHOE STORE ROBBED OF $2400 IN CASH

Thieves Obtain Entrance to J. G. Brandt Premises by Prying Open a Rear Door.

ATTEMPT IS MADE ON ANOTHER FIRM

Mermod-Hill Sporting Goods Company Entered and Safe Tampered With Unsuccessfully.

Between $2400 and $2500 in cash, and checks totaling about $500, were taken about 8 o'clock last night from a safe in the J. G. Brandt Shoe Co., 618 Washington avenue.

A policeman at 8:20 o'clock discovered that a rear door at 619 St. Charles street, which had been secure an hour before, had been forced open. Entering, he found that the combination of the store safe, which was on a balcony, had been battered off and the inner door pried open. Emil H. Bickel of 4005 Greer avenue, manager of the store, gave the estimate of loss, which was the Saturday receipts of the store.

Shortly afterwards it was discovered that the front door of the Mermod-Hill Sporting Goods Co., at 811 Locust street, had been jimmied. The burglars apparently were frightened away, for though the safe showed signs of tampering, it still was secure. A cash register and desk had been forced open and $25 taken.

Cash estimated at $500, consisting of the Saturday receipts of the store, were taken from a safe in the H. J. Klinger Produce Co., 6319 Easton avenue, which was found rifled when the store was opened this morning. Entrance was through a side window, which had been forced.

Child Bitten by Rat.

Ellen Holster, 2 years old, daughter of Mrs. Myrtle Holster of 1205 Mississippi avenue, was taken to the city hospital to be treated for rat bites on both hands. The mother told the police she had been awakened at 3 a. m. yesterday by the child's screams, and on turning on the light saw a rat jump from the bed where the child had been sleeping.

"RIOT" PROVES TO BE WEDDING "SHOWER"

Policemen Depart After Being Served With Lunch at Fraternity Temple Hall.

When several wagon loads of police rushed to the Fraternity Temple Building, Grand avenue and West Pine boulevard, last night, in response to a "riot" call, they found about 500 persons were attending a party in honor of the approaching wedding of Miss Augusta Altschuler, 23 years old, 2729 Stoddard street, and Maurice R. Eisen, proprietor of a millinery store at 1428 Franklin avenue.

The "riot" call was sent in by some disgruntled youths who had been refused admittance to the festivities, Mrs. Ike Altschuler, mother of the prospective bride, said.

The party was incidental to a shower, through which, Mrs. Altschuler said, the couple had received many beautiful presents.

"You could take my word for it, the party was a grand success," Mrs. Altschuler related. "The police, as soon as they came in, saw there was not a riot, but instead, everyone was having a fine time, and the officers just ate a little lunch and went away. No one who was dancing knew the police were there. Only those who were in the room where the lunch was being served saw them."

Mrs. Altschuler said 300 invitations were sent out to friends of the families of the engaged couple, who are to be married April 28. About 500 persons attended, however, many of those who had been invited bringing several of their friends with them.

Altschuler, the father of the bride-to-be, was stationed at the front door and when the young men who are believed to have sent in the riot call appeared, he turned them away. "I knew them as soon as I saw them," he said. "They are some smart-alecks who hang around a poolroom in the neighborhood and I didn't want them mixing with my friends.

"Anyway, you can say that the police coming did not spoil the party at all. Everyone had a good time and the only trouble we had was getting all the things home that were given to Augusta and Maurice."

WOMAN, 61, DIES AFTER BEING STRUCK BY AUTO

Miss Emma Spiekerman Injured at Grand and Lindell; Driver Says She Stepped in Path.

Miss Emma Spiekerman, 61 years old, who lived at the Beers Hotel, Grand avenue and Olive street, died at St. John's Hospital at 8:50 a. m. today, of injuries suffered at 7:30 last evening, when struck at Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard by an automobile driven by Harry S. Konetzky, 42, of 4222 Holly avenue.

Miss Spiekerman was dragged about 75 feet by the machine, which turned west into Lindell from Grand. The machine had to be lifted from her body. She was crossing from the north to the south side of Lindell, on the west side of Grand. Policemen were told that her right arm and left thigh were fractured and that she suffered, in addition, scalp wounds, cuts and bruises. Konetzky said she stepped in front of the car too late for him to stop.

Twelve persons were injured in eight automobile accidents between the early hours of yesterday morning and this morning, many of the accidents being traced to the rain or the slippery streets.

Victor Delamano, 32, of Collinsville, Ill., stopped his machine in front of 3845 South Broadway to look into the gasoline tank and while he was examining it an automobile driven by Harold Schneider of 229 East Marceau street struck him. Delamano's skull was fractured and his scalp wounded.

Machines Collide in Park.

The machines of Edward Newman of 2204 North Tenth street and John Niemeyer of 4219 Linton avenue collided in Fairground Park. Clyde Masters, 45, of 2133 Gano avenue, riding with Newman, was thrown against the windshield and his scalp and face were cut.

Otto Hoffman, 35, a city fireman, of 3057 Thomas street, driving his car south on King's highway at Page boulevard, ran into a Ford sedan which had stopped momentarily, and then drove away. Hoffman was cut by glass from the windshield. He started to walk south, but another Ford sedan, driven by Manford Arnold of 6219 McPherson avenue, struck him. His scalp was cut. Timothy Horan, 38, of the Thomas street address, who was riding with Hoffman, was cut and bruised.

Woman Injured.

Mrs. Laura Rhodes, 45, of 5572A Enright avenue, crossing Union boulevard at Enright avenue, was struck by a machine driven by Harry E. Wuertenbacher Jr. of 4112 Flora boulevard, and suffered a sprain of the left knee, scalp wounds, cuts and bruises.

William H. Walker, 54, of 4199A Manchester avenue, was crossing Gravois avenue in front of 6805 when a westbound automobile struck him. He suffered contusions of the left hip and scalp wounds. The machine speeded away.

Ralph Wolf of 3665 Shenandoah avenue and John and Irving Unterberg of 3819 Shenandoah avenue, riding in Wolf's machine, were all cut and bruised when the car skidded at Grand avenue and Meramec street, hit a lamp post and overturned.

Irwin Mummert, 21, of 3506 Missouri avenue, swung his car to avoid a pile of wood blocks on the King's highway viaduct, skidded and ran into a machine driven by D. F. McCarthy of 3557 Halliday avenue. Mummert was cut by windshield glass. The blocks were left by street repairmen, indicated by eight red lights. Some one had run into the pile and broken most of the lights before Mummert came.

The automobiles of Sterling Campbell, who lives at the Missouri Athletic Association, and Albert W. Mueller of 3202 Ivanhoe avenue, collided at Euclid avenue and Lindell boulevard. Mueller was cut and his wife, who was with him, suffered injuries to her knees.

William Eaton, 60, of 5730 Columbia avenue, was cut and bruised when knocked down by an automobile driven by William L. Miles of Webster Groves as Eaton stepped into the street to take a car at 6700 Manchester avenue.

Youth Mistakes "Hurry-Up" Wagon for a Rubberneck Bus

Young Man Who Scrambles Into Patrol With Prisoners Found to Be Carrying Whisky.

A young man scrambled into a patrol wagon in front of Central Police Station yesterday afternoon along with several prisoners who were about to be transported to Union Station.

When questioned by a patrolman, he said he had mistaken the patrol for a sight-seeing motorbus. He was taken into the Captain's office, where he admitted that he had been drinking. Two pint flasks of whisky were found in his possession and he was sent to the city hospital pending application for a warrant charging him with having liquor in his possession.

The prisoner registered as Roderick H. Tait Jr., 27, of 701 Limit avenue, and requested that his father, who he said was head of the Tait & Nordmeyer Engineering Co., be notified.

CADET GREY UNIFORMS FOR TRAFFIC AND MOUNTED POLICE

Straw Caps, Requested by the Traffic Men, Will Take Place of Sumer Sun Helmets.

Horizon blue will be replaced by cadet gray and serge will be substituted for all-wool in the summer uniforms of the police traffic and mounted squads this summer. The traffic patrolmen, at their own request, will wear straw caps of military design instead of sun helmets, and will have full-length trousers instead of knickerbockers and leather leggings, which they considered extremely uncomfortable.

Mounted patrolmen will wear riding breeches and Montana hats, these latter being light felt affairs with straight brim and crown running to a peak.

Motorcycle policemen will have uniforms of cadet gray also, but they will continue to wear puttees to protect their legs when riding.

LONG'S CAMPAIGN MANAGERS

Breckinridge Long, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, announced his campaign managers yesterday at Jefferson City, following a conference with friends. Long is expected to return to St. Louis tonight and will prepare for the active campaign.

W. R. Hollister of Jefferson City, former executive secretary of the Democratic National Committee and now publisher of the Missouri State Journal, will be Long's campaign manager. Mrs. Katherine Halterman of Mount Vernon is assistant manager and former Judge Frank A. Thompson of St. Louis will be associated in an advisory capacity. In a statement, Long said that his campaign "will be prosecuted with energy and vigor and carried into every voting precinct in Missouri."

SECOND TREE LISTED IN BOTANICAL SURVEY

Magnolia Grandiflora on Cabanne Avenue Only One of Species That Grew Here.

The second tree to be listed by the Missouri Botanical Garden in its survey of historical and otherwise unusual trees in and about St. Louis is a great laurel magnolia (magnolia grandiflora) in the garden of Leonard Matthews at 5447 Cabanne avenue. The first tree listed was the Daniel Boone "judgment tree" at Femme Osage, near Washington, Mo.

The Matthews tree is unusual because it is the sole survivor of repeated attempts to make the magnolia grandiflora grow in St. Louis. The farthest north of its native habitat is Southern Arkansas. Trees planted time and again in the Botanical Garden have frozen back in winter until they died. Matthews planted 50 of them in 1891, and this is the only one which lived.

Tree Blooms in April.

But this tree not only is alive but is vigorously healthy. Persons riding on Hodiamont cars may notice a delicious odor in April or May and will know that the magnolia is in bloom. Commonly the tree bears from 20 to 40 blooms and such blossoms! Great cup-like white flowers resembling the waxen water lily and from six to eight inches in diameter. In the south, under culture, the blossoms sometimes reach a diameter of 14 inches. "Odor so fragrant as to be disagreeable to some people," the current issue of the Botanical Garden's bulletin states.

The tree is sheltered on the north and west and this may account for its survival where all others have perished. Perhaps it may be nature's reward for the diligence and love which Matthews has expended on his garden, an ornate one with many rock effects and emphasizing shrub growths. Matthews is 90 years old—a retired banker whose first business partner was Edwards Whitaker—but he still "potters" among his flowers.

Had Steady Growth.

The Matthews magnolia has had a steady, though slow growth since it was planted, a seedling, more than 30 years ago. It now is a foot in diameter at its base and is 20 feet high. The mature growth of the magnolia grandiflora in the South is a diameter of four feet and a height of 80 feet. Some success in growing the trees has been experienced in Washington and Philadelphia, but the only evidences of similar efforts here are the Matthews magnolia and one little specimen at the Botanical garden which has been frozen back so consistently that it now is nothing more than a shrub and does not bloom.

Though the grandiflora cannot be successfully acclimated, the bulletin lists 13 other varieties which may be cultivated here for ornamental purposes. One of the most delightful sights of early spring in the Botanical Garden is the Chinese magnolias in full bloom.

Italian Earth Tremor Noted at Rome.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 27.—A violent earth tremor was registered by the Rome seismograph Saturday. It was calculated that the disturbance was 9,000 kilometers away.

NAPOLEON'S COFFEE

It is said that Napoleon drank from twenty to twenty-five cups of coffee daily—

An excessive amount for an ordinary man, but then Napoleon was not an ordinary man.

He experienced only the pleasant stimulation felt by the moderate coffee drinker at CHILDS—

A stimulation that greatly increases the capacity for mental and physical labor.

CHILDS coffee also has a real food value, for it is enriched with creamy milk.

MILLIONAIRE, 60, HOPES WIFE, 21, WILL RETURN

He Doesn't Think Disparity in Age Led to Desertion and Believes She Still Loves Him.

By the Associated Press.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 27.—Jonathan Godfrey, millionaire manufacturer who, in his sixties, finds himself deserted by the young wife whom he married in 1919 when she was 18, is as much at a loss to understand why she should have left him as he was when she first told him last week she intended to return to her former home in Bristol, R. I.

"They say it is the disparity of ages that has caused all the trouble," he said. "I do not think so. When Estelle Hodge became my wife she loved me truly. I do not say this on my own assertion, but rather on that of my friends and hers. It showed in her speech, her face and her actions. Since marriage I have always tried to span the breach of years by conforming to her younger ideas.

"Everywhere we have gone together, to the theater, to dances and to dinners, I have always been ready for a good time. Late hours do not worry me. Two or three in the morning at a party never means anything, but I did not believe in two nights of that sort in succession. Neither did Mrs. Godfrey for that matter.

Set in Her Ideas, He Says.

"I think there comes a time in every woman's life when marriage begins to pall. The great difference is that some give way to the feeling and others don't. Such a time, I believe, has come to my wife. She is quite a set little lady in her ideas, you know, and when she decides on some action she usually carries it out.

"There is something else that I think has had an effect on her. Quite recently there came to the Contemporary Club a Dr. Frederick Pierce, eminent psychologist, from New York City. He was wonderful. Every idea he transmitted to the audience was so clear a child could understand it. One of his strongest points concerning the subconscious mind was that when a thought enters the senses, if thrust aside, ignored, not considered, it will return, and keep returning and permeating the mind until it is satisfied. It may be my wife considered that if she satisfied that little thought creeping through her mind, of leaving me, her mind would be at rest. I only assume these things.

"She is staying with her mother in Bristol now. For how long I know not. Her mother is a confirmed invalid; the house is small; there is little to hold Mrs. Godfrey's interest up there.

"Only Real Home She Has."

"Even if her love for me had really died, and I cannot believe that either, why did she go and leave a good home? It is the only real one she has. She cannot stay at her mother's or at a friend's indefinitely. She must come back some time. I always have left her free to do as she pleased. She has a wide circle of friends here; she is beloved and obeyed everywhere. If she wants to run down to New York, where she is welcomed at any time, there is always a car and chauffeur at her disposal. I never have restricted her in the least.

"I can only hope that it is just a temporary feeling with my wife; that her friends and mother will bring her around to seeing things in their true light; and that soon, very soon, she will come back to me again."

Both Godfrey and his young wife denied that there was any other man in the case. The elderly millionaire dismissed as not worthy of comment the mention of the name of Count Edmundo Rusnoli, his young nephew, in connection with the case.

"It is utterly ridiculous to link the name of Count Rusnoli in this matter," he said. "There was absolutely no community feeling between the two, and, furthermore, the Count has been in Italy for some time."

WILL TRY TO PROLONG ARMY OFFICERS' LIVES

Doctors Making Efforts to Locate Definitely Any Conditions That May Be Corrected.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Army doctors are hopeful that a "very appreciable prolongation of life" among regular army officers will result from steps now being taken as a result of the annual physical examination of the commissioned personnel. Under special instructions issued to army doctors by Surgeon-General Ireland when the January physical examinations began, efforts are being made to locate "definitely any focal infections (abscessed teeth, diseased tonsils, infected sinsus, etc.), or other conditions which may be responsible for chronic degenerative changes.

"The removal of such underlying causes," Gen. Ireland said in a memorandum to Major-General Harbord, Deputy Chief of Staff, "may result to a normal condition and very appreciable prolongation of life."

The memorandum pointed out that the annual examinations were undertaken 14 years ago primarily with a view to eliminating those officers "found incapacitated," but that of recent years the value of the work toward "health preservation" had been stressed. As a part of this development, "a very thorough investigation of the medical records of all commissioned officers of the army" is in contemplation, Gen. Ireland said, "with the object of detecting correctible abnormal conditions which might have a bearing on life expectancy." Determination of "the influence of the world war on physique," and also the effect of tropical service in the army on health, would be a part of this study, he added, and "life expectancy tables for the commissioned personnel" could be prepared on the data obtained.

HYDROPLANE TRIP FROM LISBON TO RIO JANEIRO IS PLANNED

Portuguese Officers Hope to Make 4000-Mile Transatlantic Flight in 60 Hours.

By the Associated Press.

LISBON, March 27.—Three Portuguese cruisers left yesterday to different points in the Atlantic Ocean have sailed as a convoy stations for two Portuguese officers who will make an attempt to fly in a hydroairplane from Lisbon to Rio Janeiro.

The date of the start of the flight has not been fixed definitely, but the aviators hope, with favorable weather conditions, they will be able to make the transatlantic passage of more than 4000 miles in 60 hours. The machine to be used will develop 360 horsepower and is expected to attain a speed of 80 miles an hour. The route of the aviators will be from Lisbon to the Canary Islands, thence to the Cape Verde Islands, thence to Fernando Noranha, a short distance northeast of Pernambuco, and on southward to Rio.

ALBANIAN GOVERNMENT STARTS ON RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

30 Foreign Engineers Engaged for New Highway and Public Works.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The Albanian Government has embarked on a comprehensive reconstruction program which will be carried to completion with the aid of the best obtainable foreign engineering talent. Commissioner Chekrem was advised yesterday in official dispatches. As a start, it was said, 30 foreign engineers have been engaged to take charge of the construction of new highways and other public works. American, British and Italian experts will be appointed to administrative positions in various administrative branches of the Government, Chekrem said.

'SCIENTIFIC BURGLAR' CONFESSES.

Always Called a Taxi to Escape in; Loot Estimated at $500,000.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Burglaries of scores of homes, the loot from which totaled in value more than $500,000, are attributed by the police today to Edward ("Eddie") Collins, known as the "scientific burglar," and from whom they say they have obtained a confession.

Collins, according to the police, made it a rule to "work alone," never to bother with what he called "small stuff" and to specialize in a single profitable territory which he knew thoroughly. Most of his alleged robberies were committed during the absence of owners from their homes. After he had picked up everything worth while in a house or apartment, it is said, he would use the telephone to call a taxicab in which to make his escape. All his illgotten gains, he is quoted as saying, have been spent on drugs.

HEIR TO MILLION FOUND IN BOWERY BY MOTHER

Seventh Escapade of Gordon Duffield Will Be the Last, His Parent Thinks.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The seventh study of the "down and out" which Gordon Duffield, 18 years old, heir to $1,000,000, has been making in Bowery lodging houses and East Side crannies for the last five months, while the heart of his mother, Mrs. Graham Duffield, ached with anxiety as she hunted everywhere for him, was completed yesterday when mother and son were happily reunited.

Mrs. Duffield said she was so convinced that this would be her boy's last adventure of that character that she would return to Chicago and that Gordon would go back to the school at Plainfield, N. J., from which he disappeared.

At present, she said, he was in care of friends and that Dr. William E. Burke, principal of the school, would look after him.

"He hated to give up," the mother said. "He looked unusually well and much better than I thought he would. He has been in New York all the time, but had no thrilling experiences. He worked at odd jobs along the East Side from Brooklyn Bridge to the Bronx. I am very grateful for all that has been done by everybody in helping me to find him.

"It's over," she said, with great relief. "This is Gordon's seventh escapade of this kind," she continued. "Six times before this he has run away from home to 'see the world.' This was his most successful truancy of the lot, however."

Mrs. Duffield said her son imagined when he came to New York he would quickly make a large amount of money. "The first three days," she said, "he told me he made only 25 cents."

25,000 INVADE CONEY ISLAND WHEN THERMOMETER SAYS 72

2000 Luxuriate in Surf While Others Eat "Hot Dogs" and 10 Youngsters Become Lost.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—With the temperature giving New York a super-spring touch of 72 degrees, Coney Island enjoyed another preseason vogue yesterday and last night, with more than 125,000 persons invading the famous summer park.

Fully 2000 men, women and children donned bathing suits and luxuriated on the sands and sported in the surf in true midseason manner.

It was a regular "Coney Island" day, with "hot dogs" going briskly. The air of midseason realism was added to by the loss of 10 children, who, while in the care of the busy police, had their terrors assuaged with the judicious use of lollypops. On every hand the coatless called "Spring is here."

RARE OLD WINES RECOVERED

Two Armed Men Guarding Liquid Loot Are Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 27.—Thirty-five cases of rare old French and Italian wines, stolen by 20 masked robbers from the country home of J. H. Caperton early Friday have been recovered from the basement of a home at Pewee Valley, 20 miles from here. Two men asleep in the house with loaded pistols and rifles beside their beds were arrested by county patrolmen and later in the day five other men, said to have been implicated in the alleged confession of one of the men, were arrested.

No trace was found of a quantity of whisky, valued at thousands of dollars, taken from the Caperton wine cellar at the same time as the wines.

I RICHLY CLAD GIRLS IN COURT

"Desire to Dress Like Others," Cause of Presence, Magistrate Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Eleven girls, ranging in age from 17 to 23, all except one in sealskin coats, were charged yesterday with shoplifting and held for trial. Magistrate Silberman in an address from the bench, said:

"Surely, the present economic situation is being reflected in the lives of these young women. That seemingly unchangeable desire to dress as well as the more fortunate of their sisters, caused these girls to take a chance to secure some of the finery they long so much for." Continuing, the Magistrate said that on Fifth avenue Saturday he noticed among the shoppers a number of women who had appeared before him in Women's Court in the last six months. "I'll wager," he said, "that not one-half of one per cent of those women whom I observed wearing sealskins on Fifth avenue are rightfully entitled to wear them."

C. T. L. U. State Delegates Named.

The Central Trades and Labor Union yesterday elected its secretary, David Kreyling; Harry Norman of the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union and Edward Johnson of the Street Car Men's Union, to represent it at the annual convention of the State Federation of Labor at Hannibal, May 22. The "children's crusade," being organized by Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, St. Louis Socialist, to send children of political prisoners to Washington to ask President Harding for the release of their fathers, was indorsed, following an appeal by Mrs. Stanley J. Clark, wife of one of the prisoners.

REPINGTON TALKS OF NEAR EAST PROBLEMS

Says Chaos Would Result if British Rule in India Should End.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles A'Court Repington, English writer on war and post-war conditions, who is to lecture tonight at Mary Institute, spoke to a Post-Dispatch reporter, at Hotel Statler today, of the connection between England's problem in India, which is before the world's eye, and the problem of Turkey, regarding which an important proposal has been announced today by the allied Foreign Ministers. The fact of this proposal was not known to Col. Repington at the time of the interview.

"Because Gandhi is a person of saintly demeanor and professions," Col. Repington said, "some persons have thought the Government should not interfere with him. But if British rule is destroyed in India, absolute chaos will ensue, and this will be true whether British rule is destroyed by saintly methods or by other means.

Serious Results for Christians.

"There is another phase of the question of India, which you in America should keep in mind. If our Government is squeezed, between the demands of its Mohammedan subjects in India and the pressure of France and Italy, into surrendering Constantinople, part of Thrace and a large part of Asia Minor back to Turkey, the result will be a very serious situation for the Christian peoples of Asia Minor. The Turks have always massacred Christians, and always will if they have the chance.

"The United States is interested in Armenia, though perhaps you haven't done very much for the Armenians of late. You are independent enough to take a stand against the return of Turkish sovereignty over Christian populations.

"The United States really stands in the eyes of Europe for justice and righteousness. The United States has a tremendous voice, because of its financial claims upon European countries, but there is also a moral prestige that makes Great Britain, and the whole British commonwealth of states, prepared to go along with you in such matters as the protection of racial minorities."

Col. Repington is 64 years old, and his active military career was in Afghanistan, Burma, the Soudan and South Africa. His "Diary," published in 1920, was one of the notable books of the period. He is an urbane and upstanding figure, with fresh complexion and heavy mustaches, and he manifests a hearty interest in things American. He inquired of the reporter as to sentiment in the Middle West toward the St. Lawrence ship canal project, and when told that more interest was taken here in the Mississippi waterway, he asked questions as to the problems of river navigation, the draft required, and the trade possibilities.

Found Views in U. S. Uniform.

"You have your sectional interests," he remarked, "but on questions of international concern I find about the same views being held in all parts of the United States that I have visited.

"Prohibition doesn't concern me personally," he said in reply to an inquiry. "Drink is at the bottom of three-fourths of the crime in most countries, and I think you were brave to take such a means of dealing with it. Brave rather than wise, perhaps, for it is yet to be shown how effective prohibition can be made. At present, with a large part of the people breaking the law, you still have a serious problem."

Irish Problem Still a Problem.

Regarding Ireland, and the latest conflict which has arisen there, Col. Repington said that Americans had as thorough information about Ireland, and as good an opportunity to judge the situation, as Englishmen had. "Does anybody think the Irish problem will ever be solved?" he remarked. "It's a thousand pities that there had to be a breach at this time between the two Irish parties, but if they want to fight each other I don't see how they can be stopped."

He expressed the view that a new conference between the nations of wider scope than the recent conference on limitation of armaments, should be called by the United States, to consider comprehensively the problems of peace and world restoration, and that Germany and Russia should be represented in such a conference. He said the claim of the United States Government for money for maintenance of its troops on the Rhine, was sound in equity, but was not legally so strong as it would be if the United States had ratified the Versailles treaty.

U. S. DOMINICAN POLICY IS TERMED IMPERIALISTIC

Former Minister to Santo Domingo Says Reign of Terror Has Existed for Nearly Six Years.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Horace G. Knowles, former American Minister to the Dominican Republic, and also Rumania, Bulgaria, Serbia and Bolivia, reiterated charges that the United States was pursuing an "imperialistic" course in its administration of Dominican affairs in an address last night in the Community Church. Knowles is now on the counsel for the Dominican nation.

"The incursion of the United States into the Latin-American countries is more feared now than ever before," he said, after summing up the events in Santo Domingo since American occupation in 1916.

"Not only have we violated the Monroe Doctrine, but the present practical working of that doctrine is to prevent the victim country from receiving help and assistance from any sympathizing European country."

Knowles denied that the Roosevelt-Dominican treaty of 1908 was being violated by that country at the time of American occupation, or that the Dominicans were in a state of revolution, and charged that it was the "policy of Washington to stifle and suppress all news regarding our doings in Santo Domingo."

"For nearly six years," he said, "there has existed in Santo Domingo a reign of oppression, repression, suppression, torture and terror."

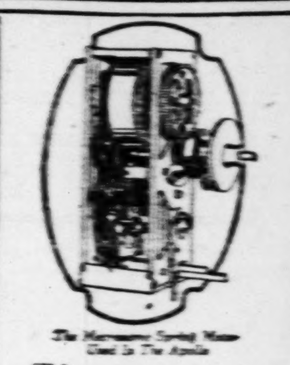
FORMER POLICEMAN ARRESTED

Louis A. Thuet, 2622 South Broadway, a former policeman who resigned Jan. 7, was arrested yesterday after policemen had taken a revolver from James Rusher, 40 years old, of 1203 Mason alley, with which Rusher had fired a shot in his home, causing his wife to rush out for the police.

Rusher said he bought the revolver from Thuet a month ago for $13. Thuet confirmed that statement and said he had sold his revolver, having no further use for it on leaving the department. Police said they would apply for a warrant charging Thuet with selling the weapon without a permit, and for Rusher for buying it without a permit.

SCALDING CAUSES BABY'S DEATH

Frank Gangel, 17-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Gangel, 7020 Oakland avenue, St. Louis County, died at Missouri Baptist Sanitarium from scalds suffered at home March 12.



The APOLLO PIANO

Aside from its excellence as a Piano, the Apollo possesses certain mechanical advantages which make it more adaptable to the use of the amateur player.

THE METRONOME SPRING MOTOR

An exclusive Apollo feature. It propels the roll, thus leaving to the foot pedal only the playing of the music. This means correct and even tempo, better interpretation, foot pumping is made easier and the motor re-winds roll without pedaling.

"BANKERS RUN NATION"

Hylan Also Says Senators Back of 4-Power Pact Will Repent.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—John Hylan, Mayor of New York, in a speech here a meeting of the Knights of Columbus last night, charged that "a little coterie of international bankers virtually run the United States Government for their own selfish interests."

Hylan also assailed "invisible government," which, he said, is a real menace to the republic. Referring to the so-called four-Power treaty recently ratified by the Senate, he declared: "The Senators, who, by their action, have made the free and independent United States of America the prop of crumbling European or warlike Asiatic dynasties, may live to regret the day and the deed that was done on it. As surely as the sun shines these Senators will reap the harvest of the whirlwind of public condemnation which they have sown by this awful act of ratification."

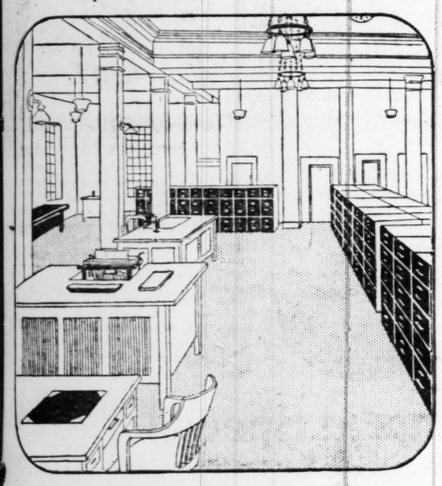
Armstrong's Linoleum
for Every Floor in the House



What makes a floor good?

Several things do. You may never have thought much about them, but they're important

MEN who decide on what kind of floor a business office needs have several things to think about.

Will many people use this office? If so, the floor must be durable and it must be quiet. A floor that echoes footsteps makes desk work difficult.

Is the floor easy to clean? A waterproof floor is desirable. If it is a dignified office, the floor must be good-looking. Then come the questions of cost, upkeep, and refinishing.

If you list all the qualities you think a floor in a business or public building should have, you will find yourself describing a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum.

The illustration shows a section of the offices of The Phoenix Insurance Company, of Hartford. The floors are Armstrong's 3-16-inch Battleship Linoleum, installed as a permanent floor by being cemented down firmly over a layer of builders' deadening felt.

Consult your architect, contractor, or any good linoleum merchant for estimates on Armstrong's Linoleum for your floors. We shall gladly supply data and specifications for laying.

All Armstrong's Linoleum is guaranteed to give satisfaction.

TERRA COTTA DEALERS AND FIRMS INDICTED

St. Louis Concerns Among Those Accused of Maintaining Monopoly.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Seven terra cotta companies and their officers, of Chicago, Denver, Kansas City and St. Louis, were named in an indictment returned before Federal Judge Carpenter today.

The indictment charged conspiracy and the maintenance of a monopoly in restraint of trade.

The companies and officers named follow:

American Terra Cotta and Ceramic Co., Chicago, W. D. Gates, president; Denver Terra Cotta Co., Denver, George P. Fackt, vice president; the Midland Terra Cotta Co., Chicago, Hans Mendrus, president; Northwestern Terra Cotta Co., Chicago, Harry J. Lucas, vice president; St. Louis Terra Cotta Co., St. Louis, R. F. Grady, vice president; Western Terra Cotta Co., Kansas City, William Timmerman, president; Winkle Terra Cotta Co., St. Louis, John G. Hewett, vice president.

The indictment is the sixth of the kind returned in this district in connection with the Government's nation-wide investigation of conditions in the building industry.

The Government charges that the National Terra Cotta Society members manufacture 95 per cent of the terra cotta used in this country. It further alleges that the members of the society divided the country into three districts—eastern, central and western, and agreed to confine their sales to their particular districts. The indictments returned today allege that the manufacturers of the eastern and central districts had adopted "the Eddy plan of open competition," which recently was condemned by the Supreme Court of the United States.

St. Louis Concerns Were Indicted In New York Last Fall.

The St. Louis and Winkle Terra Cotta companies were among 22 firms indicted by a Federal grand jury in New York last September on similar charges.

At that time, R. F. Grady, vice president and general manager of the St. Louis company, declared that charges of price-fixing and monopoly were baseless. He declined to comment on today's indictments. Andrew Winkle, president of the Winkle Terra Cotta Co., said last September that the indictments then returned were a surprise and that his company was in no price-fixing agreement. He could not be reached today.

WILLIAM PHILLIPS NOMINATED AS UNDERSECRETARY OF STATE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—William Phillips of Massachusetts, present Minister to The Netherlands, was nominated today by President Harding to be Undersecretary of State, succeeding Henry P. Fletcher, who soon will take up his new post as Ambassador to Belgium.

The President also nominated Leland Harrison of Illinois, now attached to the State Department, as Assistant Secretary of State, succeeding Fred Morris Dearing, who recently was named Minister to Portugal.

Delay in Burch's Trial.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 27.—A half-day delay was granted by Superior Judge Reeve today in the second trial of Arthur C. Burch, charged with the murder of J. Belton Kennedy. Defense counsel asked for continuance of a week, stating that two defense attorneys were engaged in another trial. Judge Reeve granted a delay until afternoon.

SENATE AND HOUSE DELEGATION OFF ON MUSCLE SHOALS TRIP

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 27.—A congressional party comprising 14 Senators and 11 Representatives left here early today on the first leg of a tour of inspection which will take them to every unit of the Government's power and nitrate projects at Muscle Shoals and Gorgas, Ala.

Included in the party are 10 members of the Senate Agriculture Committee, 10 members of the House Military Affairs Committee and four Senators and one Representative who are traveling as ex-officio members.

Private offers for lease and purchase of the uncompleted and latent war plant laid before Congress by Secretary Weeks are in the hands of the two committees for study and reports. The purpose of the inspection, it was stated, is to acquaint the members with the physical properties and to gain an idea of the potentiality of Tennessee River power.

The afternoon will be passed at the Government-owned Warrior steam plant at Gorgas. The party will put in tomorrow and Wednesday at Muscle Shoals.

"ADVISING ALL MY FRIENDS TO USE INTERNAL BATHS"

Miss Etta May Allis of 3716 Central St., Kansas City, Mo., writes to Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute.

"I have received your letter showing an interest in the results I received from the 'J. B. L. Cascade.' In my opinion it is wonderful and should be in every home. I am doing a lot of talking for it and my friends are all interested."

The "J. B. L. Cascade" cleanses the lower intestine its entire length and keeps it always free of poisonous waste.

Thousands testify that Constipation, Indigestion, Stomach Troubles, Biliousness, Headaches and all the many serious troubles which they cause are absolutely relieved and prevented by this Nature Treatment. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, will gladly explain to you the simple operation of the "J. B. L. Cascade," why it is so certain in its results, and will give you free of cost, an interesting little book containing the results of the experiences of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, who was a specialist on Intestinal Complaints for 25 years in that city. Why not cut this out as a reminder to get this book as soon as possible. Remember, please, it is free.

News of the Business World

By Wire to the Post-Dispatch

March 27.

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Long-time loans for cattlemen which went begging 10 days ago, have been snapped up in the last few days on every side and a financial situation which was unusual and unprecedented has been relieved. Cattlemen would not accept proffered loans for replenishing their stock, even though the interest rate was low and the terms easy because they had no place to graze and water their enlarged herds. The tremendous rains of last week, in some districts the first good rains in three years, were just what the cowmen had been waiting for. The range is turning green, the creeks and rivers are full and depleted herds are being restocked.

Retail furniture dealers report a heavy increase in sales throughout the Southwest. This is attributed to the large number of new homes being built. Union plumbers voluntarily have reduced their wage scales from $10 to $9 a day. The open shop movement is well under way at San Antonio, Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth.

Iron and steel salesmen report inquiries increasing and a gain in the amount of tonnage being shipped to Southwestern points. Jobbers who cover this territory now have 100 per cent of their salesmen on the road for the first time in two years.

The car lot movement of Texas onions began yesterday.

LULL IN NEW ENGLAND.

BOSTON.—Business in New England unquestionably has slowed up in the last few weeks and conditions look as though they would be worse before they are better. The two principal New England industries are textiles and boots and shoes. People throughout the country cannot or will not buy shoes and clothing, the cost of which still is far above the pre-war figures.

Manufacturers assert these prices are the result of wage scales which still are close to the war-time peak. Workers have declined to accept reductions in wages of 20 per cent in the cotton mills of Rhode Island and New Hampshire and strikes have followed which still continue.

The mill executives assert they are not anxious to reduce wages, but say their hands are being forced by the big selling agencies which handle their output. Cotton goods, and to a lesser degree woolens, they add, cannot be sold on a basis of present costs.

The same general situation exists in the shoe business. Manufacturers say St. Louis and other Western centers are selling shoes at retail cheaper than they can be made in New England under present wage scales. Representatives of the workers claim the cost of living prevents acceptance of reductions.

UNEMPLOYMENT DECREASE.

SAN FRANCISCO.—A continued decrease in unemployment, an increase in building operations and a widening range of industrial activity characterized the opening of this week in California.

Bidding for this season's crops, as yet unmatured, is increasingly in evidence. Asparagus is moving to market slowly and prices are high. Crops are somewhat backward, owing to cool weather, but the outlook is excellent for both fruit and grain.

While labor trouble in the building trades continues in some districts, there is less disposition on the part of either employers or employes to force the fighting. A scarcity of skilled mechanics is a factor in the situation.

Inquiries which have followed the announcement of lower railroad rates indicate a heavy tide of tourist travel.

The metal trades are showing marked improvement in conditions with a gain of 20 per cent in the number of people employed.

The revival of shipbuilding promises further expansion.

The dress goods trade is improving and in all other retail lines the outlook for spring is bright.

LEGION FILLS 200 JOBS.

ATLANTA, Ga.—American Legion members here have found employment for 200 former service men in the last week out of the 500 who applied. Merchants and civic bodies are co-operating with their efforts.

SITUATION IN CANADA.

OTTAWA.—There has been a resumption of outdoor work in Canada and gratifying decline in the number of unemployed. The iron and steel trades, however, are facing difficult times and the agricultural implement dealers are finding the farmers reluctant to buy new equipment. The milling industry is in a very satisfactory condition with the exports of flour being well maintained in quantity.

PITTSBURG, Pa.—Glass stocks are low and a movement to put normal supplies in warehouse would prove a stimulant to trade.

HEMP.

NEW YORK.—Mexican sisal fiber is moving off well, but the demand continues to be for moderate quantities.

HARDWARE.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Richard & Conover, large hardware jobbers here, report an unusual demand for wire fencing. Not in the last four years have so many orders been received.

ONIONS.

BOSTON, Mass.—Onions are scarce in New England since the freezing of the first Texas crop and prices are high. Two ships are carrying onions here from Egypt, but Texas growers hope to beat the Egyptian shipments with their second crop.

AUTOS.

DETROIT.—On April 1 the Ford Co. will add 7000 men to its Highland Park forces and about 2000 men at the River Rouge plant. This means that in April, Ford will make about 75,000 cars and 6000 tractors.

FLINT, Mich.—The Chevrolet Motor Co. is adding about 50 men a day to its forces and is producing 800

What a Famous Doctor Says About Constipation

SIR ARBUTHNOT LANE, one of the most famous surgeons in England, has stated that "the harm done by constipation is infinitely greater and more far-reaching than that ascribed to alcohol."

Every word this great doctor says is true. The poisons absorbed from the intestine produce headache, biliousness, coated tongue, bad breath, loss of appetite, fretfulness, disturbed sleep and distressing dreams. They even make your child "catch cold" more readily.

Yet ANALAX—the scientific Fruity Laxative—will overcome all this trouble. Sometimes one tablet is all that is required.

ANALAX is as delicious as any confection—yet as potent for good as the strongest medicine. Go to your druggist today and get a box for the children. In 15 and 30 cent sizes. The large size is most economical. Manufactured by McKesson & Robbins, Inc., 91 Fulton street, New York City, who are also makers of Calox, the Oxygen Tooth Powder, and the McK & R Famous Hundred Health Helps.

Woman Kills 3 Children and Self.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 27.—Mrs. Henry Barker, 32 years old, wife of a carpenter, killed her three children, Margaret, 5; Johanna, 3, and Henry, 18 months, in her home here late last night, and then took her own life. The throats of the three children were slashed with a carving knife and the mother took her own life in the same way.

BRITISH FLYER ACCUSED OF WOMAN'S MURDER

Maj. Ronald True, Who Lived in U. S. for a Time, Held by Coroner's Jury.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 27.—A Coroner's jury, which held an inquest over the body of Gertrude Yates, otherwise Olive Young, whose body was found some time ago in the bathroom of her flat in Kensington, today returned a verdict of wilful murder against Maj. Ronald True, an English aviator, who lived for some time in the United States.

Miss Young, 22 years old, a remarkably pretty girl and frequenter of night clubs, was found dead in her bathroom a few weeks ago, shortly after a young man had left the place. Her maid said that True had visited Miss Young on the night of her death. He was arrested in a Hammersmith music hall after the police traced him through a call from the Young home for a taxicab.

True later was arraigned in police court in connection with the murder and on a charge of stealing Miss Young's jewelry. He pleaded not guilty and said he could "explain everything at the proper time." He was said at the time to be the son of a titled woman. His wife, former New York chorus girl, who was married to him in Stamford, Conn., declared she believed her husband was innocent.

True was an instructor at Ellington Field, Houston, Tex., during the war and later was employed at the Curtiss airplane works in Buffalo.

CHEMICALS.

NEW YORK.—The fertilizer and insecticide groups of chemicals show little change in price, but both are in steady demand.

FURS.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—With the season drawing to a close, fur prices in this market are on the decline and the quality of the offerings is deteriorating.

MACHINERY.

ATLANTA.—The International Harvester Co. has taken a long lease on property here and will erect a $200,000 building which will be completed in June. The company has sold four times as many tractors in this district in the last four months as in the entire year of 1921.

CHICAGO.—The farmers living within 100 miles of Chicago are sending their livestock to the Chicago yards by motor trucks instead of train in many instances. Lines of trucks equipped with special livestock frames are being operated.

STEEL.

CAMBRIDGE, O.—The American Sheet and Tinplate Co. started four more mills at its Guernsey works today. For the first time since last November the whole plant is in operation.

FLOUR.

SEATTLE.—Local demand for flour is much improved and orders from Japan are increasing. The demand is from Hongkong because of the strike there. Some orders are being received from the Southwestern United States.

COAL.

PITTSBURG, Pa.—The prospect of a miners' strike is not making much impression on the prices of coal. Good grades of mine run are quoted at $1.50 to $1.60, by-product at $1.80 to $2, and gas coal up to $2.50 at the mine.

CURRANTS.

NEW YORK.—Prices of currants here are firm, as the stocks are short and the recently bought shipments from abroad cannot reach this market for a month or more.

PAINTS.

CLEVELAND, O.—It is expected the output of the eight big paint plants here will total more than $35,000,000 this year.

BURLAP.

NEW YORK.—The burlap market is broadening, with Southern bag trade an important factor. Inquiries are increasing from the West. Cuban sugar planters are reported short of bags.

This trademark on irons and other electrical appliances stands for quality in manufacture, reliability in operation, and for thorough satisfaction.

This Is the Fastest Iron

Every woman who would be interested in getting her ironing done more quickly—and with less effort—should learn about this iron.

It has a larger ironing surface that is perfectly heated, and that holds the heat unusually well. An ironing of any given size can be done with it in less time and with less current—and less effort.

You can see where you are ironing, when you use the Westinghouse M-Iron, and you need not lean over the work, because the edge of the base is bevelled. This same bevelling makes easier the ironing of fussy pieces. We do not believe there is another iron with so many practical advantages.

Use your eyes and save your energy! Get one today!

PRISONER KILLED IN JAIL DELIVERY ATTEMPT

Sheriff's Son, 11, Runs for Police When Men Attack Father in Effort to Escape.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., March 27.—Sheriff Melvin Thaxton with the help of his 11-year-old son, prevented a wholesale jail delivery last evening. While the Sheriff fought against eight of 13 prisoners in the jail his son ran six blocks for Policeman Tom Freese, who went to the jail and as Thaxton's strength was giving way shot and killed George Wilson, 18 years old, and put the other prisoners back into their cells.

Thaxton entered the runway around the lower tier of cells at 6:30 to lock the men in their cells. His negro helper went in first, followed by his son. Thaxton remaining at the door.

Several prisoners grabbed the negro, took him to the opposite side of the runway and held him down. Dent Hinkle, who had obtained a revolver, threw it upon young Thaxton and George Wilson attacked the Sheriff, striking him with his fist on the head. The Thaxton boy, however, jumped past Hinkle and his father and ran six blocks to the police station, asking Night Chief Tom Freese and Former Sheriff Willis Harris for aid. Meanwhile eight of the prisoners in the runway attacked the Sheriff.

Hinkle struck him twice with the revolver, hitting him across the head the second time. Hinkle escaped as Thaxton gave way from the blow on the head, but Thaxton regained strength quickly enough to prevent others escaping. As his strength was ebbing, Freese arrived and a shot from his revolver struck Wilson in the neck. With their ring leader dead, the other prisoners were got back to their cells.

The Coroner's jury, immediately summoned, exonerated Freese.

Wilson was charged with attacking a girl at Carterville. He gave his home as Chicago and was working with a crew of magazine solicitors when the crime was committed.

Hinkle, who escaped, gave his home as Harrisburg, Ill., and was charged with forgery. He was 25 years old.

Thaxton has been Sheriff three years, and last night was the first time he ever entered the runway without his revolver.

CAPTAIN USES AUTOGRAPHED BILL IN LIQUOR CRUSADE

Marked Dollar, Given to Citizen Who Says He Bought Whisky, Found in Saloon.

Police Captain Kirk's autograph on a dollar bill is held at evidence against Daniel Doder, saloonkeeper at 2900 Chouteau avenue, who was arrested last night on a charge of selling whisky.

Capt. Kirk used a citizen in setting a trap for Doder, and gave him a dollar bill, across the face of which the Captain had written his name in large letters. Later, the citizen reported that he had purchased a half pint of whisky from Doder and when policemen searched the saloon they found the autographed bill in a money box. A quart bottle of whisky, two pints of homemade beer, and $88 also found in the money box, were taken as evidence.

Four men were arrested and a quantity of liquor was confiscated in police raids yesterday at the saloon of Peter Kapusak, 1601 Morgan street; restaurant of August Garner, 1424 South Grand avenue, and at the home of Sam Pipitona, 919 North Sixteenth street, and William Paul, 2501 La Salle street.

Policemen of the Mounted District poured five gallons of gasoline into a copper vat containing about 2000 gallons of corn mash in a subcellar at 5206 Shaw avenue, last night. The occupant of the house was said by neighbors to have gone to Michigan.

4-YEAR SEARCH FOR LOST WATCH

Sheldon Memorial Custodian Advertises for Keepsake.

J. E. McInnis, custodian of Sheldon Memorial, 2648 Washington boulevard, again is attempting, by means of want advertisements, to recover a watch he lost four years ago. An "adv." describing the watch and offering a reward for its return, appeared in newspapers yesterday.

The watch was a gift from McInnis' deceased wife. He says he believes whoever found it overlooked advertisements he ran at the time, or that the watch since may have changed hands. McInnis said he reported his loss to the police and asked them to look for the watch during their rounds of pawnshops. He also has looked into windows of those places to see if he could find it.

WORLD INDUSTRIES HINGES ON SOLUTION

He Explains Why It Is Join Commission and Settle

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Is Great Britain attempting to maneuver this country into a defensive position on the German reparation question, hoping us for the role of an international Shylock demanding the last ounce of flesh, while she herself wears the appearance of great but impotent liberality?

That seems the likeliest interpretation of her most recent proposal, according to Bernard M. Baruch, head of the War Industries Board and one of the American members of the commission charged with drafting the reparation and economic sections of the treaty of Versailles. Unless, of course, the Lloyd George Cabinet was merely following the European custom of sending up a trial balloon to obtain the drift of popular sentiment.

"England," said Baruch in an interview given to the New York World and the Post-Dispatch, "recently suggested that the allies might cancel or scale down their demands on Germany if America would make such leniency feasible by a comparable cancellation or scaling down of the allied war indebtedness to her. No one could realize better than Mr. Lloyd George that such a proposal was utterly illogical and unacceptable. So, if it means anything, it means simply another move in the game that has kept the reparations questions a political football, knocked about from one side to the other while Europe stood closer and closer to bankruptcy.

Views of an Observer.

"Please make it clear," he added immediately, "that in saying this I have no personal feeling. I speak merely as an observer who has had excellent opportunities to watch the development of the reparation business. The position of England has been this: From the outset, with unanimous delegation, she took the lead and succeeded in carrying France along with her on two vital points—the amount Germany should be required to pay and the declaration that Germany would be able to pay such an amount. The Anglo-French position was that Germany must make reparations not merely for actual war damages but for the aggregate war costs."

The American representatives at once predicted what has proved to be the fact, said Baruch, that any such colossal assessment would be far beyond Germany's ability to pay. They also contended that the terms of the armistice limited the scope of assessment and that the pledge then made to Germany would be violated in certain of the demands. But the Anglo-French delegations disregarded all these representations.

"So," he continued, "England won a position where she and her colleague would receive a large share of the reparations. And in May, 1921, the Reparation Commission appointed under the Versailles treaty finally fixed the amount at close to $31,000,000,000 dollars, England and France joining in this move. America's contention has been that the very outside limit was $15,000,000,000, less amounts already paid, leaving $12,000,000,000 to be collected, not immediately, but on such terms that Germany would have been given an opportunity during the first five years to get on her feet, and then have made larger payments till in about 22 years the full debt would have been wiped out."

Merely a Political Act.

No financial man, Baruch declared, ever believed that the huge assessment finally made could be collected. It was merely a political act of the English and French.

"It is too bad," he added, "that America was not represented in the Reparation Commission which levied that sum. She was at that time the only possible modifying influence to any appeal to reason and economics rather than politics. Under the Versailles treaty she had a right to representation, but the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate refused Mr. Wilson's request for authority to appoint a delegate. It is interesting to note that a member of that committee was Warren G. Harding of Ohio, who last week, as President of the United States, intimated through the press that it would be a salutary act if the Senate of its own motion gave him authority to appoint an American reparation commissioner."

Politics alone, Baruch continued during the course of events, dictated the $31,000,000,000 assessment. Then politics came into play with us also, and we, so to speak, "out-politicked" England and France and eventually signed a separate treaty with Germany which has had most unfortunate consequences. Out of it, for example, has sprung the unpleasantness centering round our demand for $22,000,000,000 out of current reparations payments to cover the cost of the Rhineland occupational forces. Out of it has sprung hope in Germany that with the allies thus split she may find a supporter in America. On it is based the propaganda put out by Germany and by distinguished, misinformed persons, emphasizing the inability of Germany to pay, and which, if it takes root in the general mind, may conceivably ...

WORLD INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL HINGES ON REPARATIONS SOLUTION, SAYS BARUCH

He Explains Why It Is Necessary for U. S. to Join Commission and Help Bring About Settlement.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Is Great Britain attempting to maneuver this German reparation question, country into a defensive position on casting us for the role of an international Shylock demanding the last ounce of flesh, while she herself wears the appearance of great but impotent liberality?

That seems the likeliest interpretation of her most recent proposal, according to Bernard M. Baruch, head of the War Industries Board and one of the American members of the commission charged with drafting the reparation and economic sections of the treaty of Versailles. Unless, of course, the Lloyd George Cabinet was merely following the European custom of sending up a trial balloon to obtain the drift of popular sentiment.

They also contended that the terms of the armistice limited the scope of assessment and that the pledge then made to Germany would be violated by certain of the demands. But the Anglo-French delegations disregarded these representations.

"So," he continued, "England won a position where she and her colonies would receive a large share of the reparations. And in May, 1921, the Reparation Commission appointed under the Versailles treaty finally fixed the amount at close to $31,000,000,000 dollars, England and France joining in this move. America's contention has been that the very outside limit was $15,000,000,000, less amounts already paid, leaving $12,000,000,000 to be collected, not immediately, but on such terms that Germany would have been given an opportunity during the first five years to get on her feet, and then have made larger payments till in about 32 years the full debt would have been wiped out."

It is interesting to note that a member of that committee was Warren G. Harding of Ohio, who last week, as President of the United States, intimated through the press that it would be a gracious act if the Senate of its own motion gave him authority to appoint an American reparation commissioner."

Politics alone, Baruch continued, tracing the course of events, dictated the $31,000,000,000 assessment. Then politics came into play with us also, and we, so to speak, "out-politicked" England and France and eventually signed a separate treaty witih Germany which has had most unfortunate consequences. Out of it, for example, has sprung the unpleasantness centering round our demand for $241,000,000 out of current reparations payments to cover the cost of our Rhineland occupational force. Out of it has sprung hope in Germany that with the allies thus split she may find a supporter in America. On it is based the propaganda sent out by Germany and by disinterested, misinformed persons, emphasizing the inability of Germany to pay, and which, if it takes root in the general mind, may conceivably enable her to escape her just deserts.

This was one thread in the comedy, or tragedy, of the bungle, as Baruch outlined his conception of it. Another of them particularly affects France.

Attitude of the French.

"The French," he said, "having followed the British instead of the American estimates on those two fundamental points, the basis for the assessment and the ability of Germany to meet it, suddenly find themselves in disagreement with the English, who, after leading them into that position, are now endeavoring to re-educate them and get them to agree on Germany's inability to pay any such amount of money as Britain had told the French could be and ought to be collected, and which Britain had helped France to assess in May, 1921."

The French, Baruch estimated, had not proved apt pupils at making the right-about-face, and the awkwardness thus rising between the two countries might very reasonably account for the British suggestion of consolidating the two separate questions of reparations and of allied indebtedness to the United States, as a herring is drawn across a trail to throw a hound off the scent. Of course, he added, there was nothing new about the suggestion. The scaling down or cancellation of the debt had been the subject of informal representations ever since the armistice was signed. But, he said, none of the allies had ever been given the slightest excuse for misunderstanding the American attitude. During the Paris discussions, the American delegation consistently made it clear that in this country the two questions were regarded as absolutely separate and distinct.

The American Position.

The American position, as set forth at the peace conference and ever since adhered to, was this:

On the reparation question, come to a reasonable agreement at once, fixing the outside limit of what the Germans must pay. Then let Germany, Europe and the rest of the world get back to work and resume production. After peace-time industrial conditions have been re-established, discuss the war indebtedness with the allies and settle the question on its merits. Any other course, such as cancellation, Baruch declared, would be not alone unwise but quite unnecessary.

"Until the world gets back to work," he said, "no one knows or can know how much Germany or any of the allies can pay. It is within the bounds of possibility that everybody can eventually pay everybody. So the suggestion from English sources of a mutual and parallel scaling down of reparations and indebtedness cannot be considered seriously. The two questions are not comparable in any way. While it is true our separate treaty with Germany would make collections very difficult, the allies are well aware we have still living very large claims justly assessable against Germany, in addition to the unpaid expenses of the Rhineland force. If they suggest that we definitely relinquish all such claims on condition that they extinguish an equal part of their repanational demands, that would be a logical and business-like proposal.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "if the allies adopted toward Germany as reassuring an attitude as our Government has apparently decided to follow, there would be danger that she might get off too easily. She should be made to pay fully what it costs to restore the war damage done to France, Italy and Belgium. And she is able to pay those actual damages, given time."

If the attempt to cast America for a villain's role by confusing the reparations and war debt issues should prove successful, the resultant feeling against us would be justified on only one ground, in Baruch's opinion. That is because of our failure to take our share of responsibility.

What Might Have Been.

"If there had been an American member of the Reparation Commission, taking a full part in all its activities and insisting on an economic basis for all decisions, the whole problem would have been solved long ago, and the world would have been years and billions nearer to restoration of normal living. No Government or group would have been able to defy very long the legitimate pressure America would have exercised. But, there being no such economic cat present, the economical mice have played. The British, for instance, know very well that the $31,000,000,000 assessment represents roughly $20,000,000,000 more than Germany could possibly pay without wrecking herself and Europe. But they insisted, and taught the French to insist, on the larger sum. Why? I can only surmise, of course. But if a shrewd mind were working along purely political lines, might it not reason that the more drastically the reparation demands go beyond Germany's ability, the more difficult it becomes for America to collect her war debt from the allies?"

He was asked what the solution was.

"There is only one solution," he

ARMY MEMBERS ASSERT LOYALTY TO IRISH REPUBLIC

Convention in Dublin, Which Had Been Forbidden by Dail Eireann Cabinet, Not Interfered With.

ACTION CONDEMNED BY FREE STATE LEADERS

Those Who Attended Meeting to Be Treated as Having Separated Selves From the Rest of the Army.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, March 27.—The convention of Irish Republican army members, which had been forbidden by the Dail Eireann Cabinet, ended its long session last night without exciting any outward demonstration to ruffle the Sunday life of Ireland.

The provisional Free State Government made no attempt to interfere with the proceedings and has not definitely stated it will take any action, although it is generally supposed that those who attended will be treated as having separated themselves from the rest of the army and their names may possibly be stricken from the army rolls.

The action of the convention in unanimously adopting a resolution reaffirming the delegates' allegiance to the Irish Republic met with strong condemnation among the supporters of the Free State. The Irish Independent today said:

"Disunion has been forced on the country. The resolution passed by the sectional convention amounts in effect to repudiation of the Dail Eireann, yet Eamonn de Valera insists that the Dail is the supreme authority in Ireland.

"In all democratic-governed countries, including republics like France and America, the army is strictly subject to the control of civil authority, or the Government for the time being. Wherever departures from that constitutional basis have taken place grave events have followed."

To Boycott Belfast.

The convention also decided to boycott Belfast and to extend the boycott to the six northern counties of Ireland.

An official statement which outlined the results of the proceedings added that the delegates present numbered 220, that they represented 49 brigades, as well as four members of headquarters and officers from eight divisional staffs and from three or four independent brigade staffs.

The meetings seemingly were only slightly affected by the declaration of Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defense, that every man attending would be suspended from the army. A majority of the delegates were youthful. Very few of them wore uniforms. The attendance included some members of the Belfast Brigade. It is said they came to Dublin not to support the purpose of the meeting, but to urge unity as essential for the protection of the Northern Nationalists.

Mulcahy declared today that the convention had been arranged by two of the five brigade commanders of the army.

The silence of Eamonn de Valera, in the face of the challenges by the newspapers to make known his attitude toward the convention, seemed perplexing in political quarters.

Collins Challenges De Valera.

Michael Collins in a speech at Waterford, challenged De Valera to reveal his views and also to dissociate himself from such "mutinous statements" as were made last week by Roderick O'Connor, Director of Engineering of headquarters staff of the Irish Republican army, in announcing that the convention would be held despite orders to the contrary.

Collins added that the greatest argument with which he would be faced at the coming conference with the authorities in London would be De Valera and that gentleman's political followers. He said Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, would not dream of coming into a union while the present dissension prevailed, and if De Valera could unite the country and his own leadership, accept the treaty and agree to work for the Free State, he (Collins) would gladly step aside. He added that he would not regret in such a contingency that so heavy a burden of responsibility had been taken from him.

Orange Hall Seized.

Forty men Saturday night took possession of the Orange party's headquarters in Parnell street. It was said they had been identified as workmen who were expelled from Belfast. The interlopers are reported to have taken food into the building with them. During the night Fowler Memorial Hall and the fish market also were seized.

Surtax on Customs Duties.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 27.—Beginning April 1, a surtax on customs duties, to bring them to a gold parity, will be collected. The tax rate will be computed on the basis that 59 paper marks are equivalent to the value of a gold mark.

Many St. Louisans Going to Europe This Year; 366 Have Applied for Passports

Average of Seven a Day Maintained Since Feb. 1, Most in Any Year Since 1914; 288 Filed in Two Months in 1921.

ST. LOUIS will be well represented in the summer invasion of Europe by American tourists this year, 366 residents having applied to the Federal Court here for passports since Feb. 1, an average of nearly seven a day, about 50 per cent more than the number in February and March of last year, when similar applications totaled 228, and, by far, the largest number that have applied in a single year since the beginning of the war in 1914.

Every country in Europe, with the exception of Russia, is included in the list of places to be visited, and more than a dozen ocean liners sailing from New York and Canadian ports between April 15 and July 1 have St. Louisans on their passenger lists.

Germany and Austria Included.

That advantage is being taken of recent resumption of peaceful relations between the United States and the Central Powers is indicated by the fact that more than 300 of the applicants have included Germany and Austria in their itinerary abroad. Seventy-five of the applicants were of German birth, and of that number 27, who had been living in America for more than 50 years, are making their first trip back to their birthplace.

How Passport Is Obtained.

Applications for passports are filed in the office of the Clerk of the United States Circuit Court. The applicant, besides furnishing a photograph, must give the date and place of birth, a list of the countries to be visited, the date and place of sailing, the name of the steamship on which departure is made, and whether or not the applicant has ever had any previous passport. The information is forwarded to the State Department at Washington, where it is approved or rejected. If granted, the passport is forwarded from Washington to a specified place. A fee of $1 is charged. A few persons residing in nearby towns have applied at the St. Louis office for passports.

Applicants for pasporis since Feb. 1 follow:—

Russian Revolution a Failure, Says Miss Goldman, and Slain by the Bolsheviki Themselves

Iron Hand of the Communist State Soon Began to Separate People From the Revolution, Which Was Their Own Work—Peace of Brest-Litovsk First of All the Subsequent Evils.

MISS GOLDMAN is writing this series from Russia fresh from a two years' stay in that mysterious land which she has just succeeded in quitting. After being barred from several other countries through the influence of the Bolsheviki she has been permitted to enter Sweden. It will be recalled that the writer, who is known throughout the world as an Anarchist, was deported to Russia together with Alexander Berkman by order of the Department of Labor in December, 1919.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 27.—The Russian revolution as a radical social and economic change meant to overthrow capitalism and establish communism must be declared a failure.

In estimating the various factors that crushed the revolution it is not enough to point out the role played by the counter revolutionary elements. To be sure, their crimes are heinous enough to condemn them unto all eternity. These Russian "patriots"—monarchists, cadets (Constitutional Democrats), Right Socialist-Revolutionists, etc.—filled the world with their clamor for intervention. What was it to them that millions of their countrymen and thousands of innocent victims from all lands were slaughtered in the unholy war against Russia?

They lived in perfect safety and security; neither the bullets of the Cheka nor the devastating hand of hunger and typhus could reach them. They could afford to play the game of patriotism. But, then, all this is sufficiently known to require no further elucidation. What is known is that the Russian and allied interventionists were not the only actors in the great social drama which ended in the death of the Russian Revolution. The other actors are the Bolsheviki themselves. It is of their role that I shall speak now.

Perhaps the Russian Revolution was doomed at its birth. Coming as it did upon the heels of four years of war which had drained Russia of her best manhood, sapped her blood and devastated her land, the revolution may not have had the strength to withstand the mad onslaught of the rest of the world. The Bolsheviki claim that the Russian people, though heroic enough for great outbursts, lack of perseverance necessary for the slow, painful, every-day exigencies of a revolutionary period. I do not admit the truth of it.

But, granted that this contention is well founded, I yet insist that it was not so much the attacks from without as the senseless and cruel methods within Russia that have killed the revolution and placed the yoke of despotism upon the people's neck. The Marxian policies of the Bolsheviki, the tactics first extolled as indispensable to the life of the revolution only to be discarded as harmful after they had wrought misery, distrust and antagonism, were the factors that slowly undermined the faith of the people in the revolution.

Revolution Doomed With People Barred From New Life It Brings

If there ever was doubt as to what constitutes the greatest danger to a revolution—outside attacks or the paralyzed interest of the people within—the Russian experience should dispel that doubt completely. The counter-revolutionists, backed by allied money, men and munitions, failed utterly; not so much by the heroism of the red army as by the revolutionary enthusiasm of the people themselves, who fought back every attack. Yet the Russian revolution has died an agonized death. How, then, explain that phenomenon?

The main causes are not far to seek. If a revolution is to survive in the face of opposition and obstacles, it is of the utmost importance that the light of the revolution be held high before the people; that they should at all times be close to the living throbbing pulse of the revolution. In other words, it is necessary that the masses should continuously feel that the revolution is of their own making, that they are actively participating in the difficult task of building the new life.

For a brief period after the October Revolution the workers, peasants, soldiers and sailors were indeed the masters of their revolutionary fate. But soon the invisible iron hand began to manipulate the Revolution, to separate it from the people, and to make it subservient to its own ends—the iron hand of the Communist state.

Bolsheviki as Jesuits.

The Bolsheviki are the Jesuit order of the Marxian Church. Not that they are insincere as men or that their intentions are evil. It is their Marxism that has determined their policies and methods. The very means they have employed have destroyed the realization of their end. Communism, Socialism, equality, freedom—everything for which the Russian masses have endured such martyrdom—have become discredited and besmirched by their tactics, by their Jesuitic motto that the end justifies all means.

Cynicism and coarseness have taken the place of the idealist aspirations that characterized the October Revolution. All inspiration has been paralyzed; popular interest is dead; indifference and apathy are dominant. Not intervention nor the blockade—on the contrary, it was the internal policies of the Bolshevik State that alienated the Russian people from the Revolution and filled them with hatred of everything emanating from it.

"What is the use of changing?" now say the people; "all rulers are alike—the poor must always suffer." It is this fatalism, coupled with submission of centuries, which has helped the Bolsheviki in their dominion over Russia. Have the Bolsheviki learned from experience that the end does not justify all means?

To be sure, Lenin often repents. At every All-Russian Communist conclave he comes forth with his mea culpa, "I have sinned." A young Communist once said to me:

"It would not surprise me if Lenin should some day declare that the October Revolution was a mistake."

Indeed, Lenine does admit his mistakes; but that does by no means prevent him from continuing the same mistaken policies. Every new experiment is proclaimed by Lenine and his zealots as the height of scientific and revolutionary wisdom. Woe be to those who dare question the justice or efficacy of the new measure! They are branded as counter-revolutionists, speculators and bandits.

Rapid Change of Face.

But presently Lenin again repents, and then begins to deride his flock as fools for having believed that the experiment was at all possible. After deluding Russia and the world for four years by his avowal that communism is in the making in Russia, Lenin at the last congress of the all-Russian soviets covered his comrades with ridicule for their naivette in believing that communism is realizable in Russia now. Yet the prison doors are still closed upon those who mildly suggested the same thing three years ago.

It would be interesting to trace the various methods employed by the Bolsheviki to achieve their ends—methods forced upon the people as the sum total of all wisdom and which resulted in the undoing of the revolution. The scope of an article does not allow a detailed analysis of everything the Bolshevik state has done. I shall here refer only to the most important methods and phases. The Brest-Litovsk peace marked the beginning of all subsequent evils. It was a deliberate denial of all that the Bolsheviki had proclaimed to the world—peace without indemnities, self-determination of all oppressed peoples, no secret diplomacy. Yet the Bolsheviki made peace with German imperialism over the heads of the German people."

A Peace of Betrayal.

The price of that peace was the betrayal of Latvia, Finland, the Ukraine and Belorussia.

(Byelo-Russia is more commonly called "White Russia." It occupies the upper parts of the Western slope of the central plateau of Russia, and the inhabitants of this section have a certain intermingling of blood with the Poles and Lithuanians. Byelo is the Russian word for "white.")

The result—several years of civil war, the disruption of the revolutionary forces, when unity was so vital to the defense of the revolution, and the beginning of Red terror which is continuing to this day.

The peasantry of the Ukraine and of Belorussia knew how to drive back the German invader, but it has neither forgotten nor forgiven the treachery of the Bolsheviki. The continuous presence of a million troops in the Ukraine to "liquidate the bandits" bears witness to the love of the Ukrainian peasants for the communist state. The ratification of the Brest peace, which Trotzky refused to sign, which Radek—then in a German prison—declared as the bankruptcy of the revolution, whil) Joffe signed it "with closed eyes," as he said, was the signal for long open and secret assistance of the peasants to the Bolshevik state.

The peasants, who were at one with the workers till the Brest betrayal, turned with hatred and antagonism from the Bolsheviki, who claimed to represent the peasants and the workers. Lenin demanded the ratification as a breathing spell for the revolution. It was one of his many blunders, but the most costly one. It strangled the revolution.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

GROWING FEDERAL CONTROL.

The Danger.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE article in your March 19 issue entitled "An Appeal to Governors to Halt the March Toward Federal Empire" is of value to all who realize, however vaguely, the gradual alteration in our scheme of government likely to result from the sixteenth and eighteenth amendments of the Federal Constitution.

Unless these be repealed or modified, the rights of states and men, heretofore so carefully guarded, must vanish before the gradual encroachment of Federal authority. These rights stand for a policy of paramount importance; namely, that free men cannot remain free unless they may choose to remove their own officers and withhold from them the means of oppression.

Congress is composed of representatives of all sections of the country—as various in natural resources as in the character and habits of the people who inhabit them. The sixteenth amendment gives a block or faction of these the power to impose all the burdens of government on those who are less numerous or influential. If, for example, farmers ascertain that their own average income is $5000 or less, they can by combination pass a law which appropriates all income in excess of that amount and to arrest the progress, cripple the industries and check the enterprise of the nation by preventing the accumulation of that capital which is indispensable to prosperity. The amendment tends to a modified communism and thrusts into the hands of the politicians means requisite for the development of the nation. It must be modified and confined to a period of actual warfare and a limited period thereafter, if we wish to avoid disaster.

The eighteenth amendment is too obviously vexatious to require comment. Your editorials have sufficiently criticised this unfortunate political indiscretion.

Both amendments are deplorable. The lawless unrest and discontent which have followed the war are less ominous than the lawful wrongs perpetrated during its commotion. I am grateful to your contributor for his wise exposition and strong condemnation of these blundering innovations. I. H. LIONBERGER.

The People Must Stop It.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AM in receipt of several copies of your issue of March 19, wherein you issued an "Appeal to Governors to Halt March Toward Federal Empire."

Let me commend your work.

I am much interested in the subject matter of your appeal. As Secretary of the Governors' Conference I have endeavored to bring before the Governors and the people of the nation the development of centralization at Washington, of governmental functions and activities.

This development, I take it, will be retarded only when the people call a halt. The people will call a halt only after a sufficiently effective campaign of education and information has been conducted. Education is the remedy, not only to retard the present tendency, but as well to restore to the people that degree of home rule which is wholly essential to a virile, effective and respected Government.

I trust that you will continue the work commenced and that your disposition in the matter may prove to be highly conscientious. M. C. RILEY.

"The Rise and Fall of U. S."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial on Sunday, March 19, in the Post-Dispatch, entitled "Appeal to Governors to Halt March Toward Federal Empire," is to be praised by all true American citizens.

With every fact truthful, it is a masterly editorial presenting to all the impending peril which the United States is stepping into. If this lust for centralized power is not halted now, this country will be at the same goal where Rome was centuries ago.

The Governors should act at once and keep future generations from studying in history's pages "The Rise and Fall of the Government of the United States."

WM. E. LESSEIG.

Evils of Federalism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ALLOW me to congratulate you upon your "Appeal to Governors to Halt March Toward Federal Empire" in issue of March 19. It is a splendid start in the right direction, although the writer appears to confine his arguments almost entirely to the matter of taxation, which, in my opinion, is only one of the many evils of Federalism which have developed in the past few years. The Transportation Act is abominable; in fact, Article 10 of our Constitution, as Goldberg would say, means absolutely nothing, although for years we "kidded" ourselves into believing it to be the greatest "Bill of Rights" ever written into any constitutional government. My earnest hope is that our Governors may be impressed by your warning and a reformation may result, but I fear nothing will be accomplished until the daily press start a campaign of enlightenment, for, while the people realize that evil exists, they don't know the real cause, and such articles as appeared in your Sunday paper will accomplish more good than a dozen conventions of Governors. Keep up the good work.

Cuero, Tex. FRANK P. SAMES.

HALTING THE IMPERIAL MARCH.

The editorial in the Sunday Post-Dispatch of March 19, appealing to Governors to halt the march of Federal Empire, has created widespread interest.

The Post-Dispatch has received many commendatory letters from readers throughout our circulation territory, some of which we have printed. The responses from Governors indicate deep interest in the subject and foreshadows a discussion of the encroachment of Federal power on the rights and powers of the states at the next Governors' conference.

Gov. Baxter of Maine, sending part of a speech on the subject delivered by him, says he is fully awake to the danger of the growing tendency to encroachment and is not only in favor of action by Governors, but is preparing a plank for the next platform of the Republican party in Maine.

It was impossible to cover all the ground of the subject and all the phases of encroachment in one editorial, but the salient facts were clearly stated, with a thorough review of the original reservations of State powers and the limits of Federal powers embodied in the Constitution. Sufficient changes of the original constitutional restrictions through amendment, congressional legislation and judicial decisions were listed to show how far the march of centralized empire has gone. The review is startling in its significance.

So many requests for copies of the editorial have been received that the Post-Dispatch has republished the editorial in pamphlet form for distribution. A reasonable number may be obtained on request.

It is evident that the warning of the Sunday Post-Dispatch is timely and that the issue it suggests, which has been taking shape in the public mind, is ripe for action to arrest further Federal seizure of power and revenue through access to the wealth of the country by direct taxation and the squandering of public money on expensive and dangerous bureaus which threaten to invade the lives and control the activities of the people at every point. The perpetuation of free local self-government is at stake.

While the Sunday Post-Dispatch appealed to the Governors of the states to formulate a plan of action, the people can make the issue and act upon it. The primary responsibility for Federal encroachment rests with Congress, which can check it at once, or, by further legislation, practically wipe out the last remnant of the powers of the states. The encroachment, except in so far as the State Legislatures have shared with Congress the responsibility for constitutional amendments, is the work of Senators and Representatives from the states, supported and enlarged by decisions of the Federal judiciary. The Federal Supreme Court has sanctioned the widest possible interpretation of congressional powers under constitutional amendments. The tendency of Government to enlarge its powers is strikingly illustrated in the accord of the chief executive, the Congress and the Federal bench in expanding and strengthening Federal powers and breaking down constitutional safeguards of the reserved rights and powers of the states, which are rapidly disappearing.

The key to the remedy is Congress. Through party conventions and primaries and in the election of Senators and Representatives pledged against encroachment and for the restoration of constitutional safeguards the American people can call a halt and avert the danger of centralized government through bureaucracies.

It is pertinent to ask men who seek election to the Senate which they intend to represent—the states whose people elect them or the Federal Government and its hunger for power, regardless of the rights of the states.

It is pertinent to ask men who seek election to the House of Representatives by the people of the congressional districts whether they intend to represent the people of the districts, within the states, upon whose votes their election depends or the Federal Government, the increasing power and activity of which threatens the perpetuation of local self-government.

If Senators and Representatives are put on record on this issue, if they are held to strict accountability for Federal encroachments and for the multiplying of Federal bureaus created by laws for the purpose of interfering with personal, state and local rights and proper activities, there will be a halt on extension of Federal power and bureaucratic control. There will be in time a restoration of the wise and salutary balance of power between the Federal and State Governments which the fathers of the republic saw clearly was necessary for the preservation of free republican government, the happiness of the people and the development of the country and the people on sound lines.

Now is the time to begin reform and the way to begin is to elect men pledged to reform, with the honesty and capacity to fulfill their pledges.

THE FORMULA OF PROGRESS.

Cleveland passed St. Louis in population in the decade preceding the last census. The news of the day reveals one of the reasons why Cleveland is going ahead. Comparisons of some of its financial figures with those of St. Louis reveals other reasons why it is progressing.

The news to which we refer is the announcement of a public reception April 15 to mark the opening of Cleveland's new $6,200,000 municipal auditorium. Cleveland's effort is the last word in capaciousness, accommodation and accessories for buildings of this character. Possibly it is too ambitious. But there are worse civic crimes. St. Louis has no such building whatever nor a cent appropriated for one. Its hope is in an issue of bonds for the erection of such a building.

The amount suggested for a St. Louis auditorium in a tentative list of improvements to be financed by a bond issue is but $1,500,000. Surely if there is any error in such an estimate it is not on the side of extravagance. If Cleveland can spend over six million St. Louis would not feel proud of limiting itself to a million and a half. It ought to feel ashamed to let the project lapse entirely. To do so would be to squander opportunity more lavishly than it could squander dollars and cents.

As to the relative ability of the cities to finance a project of this kind, a glance at the latest available figures is exceedingly interesting. Here they are:

	Debt	Tax Levy	Budget
Cleveland	$75,077,144	$11,181,320	$11,826,177
St. Louis	18,168,000	20,725,000	21,255,420

As compared with Cleveland St. Louis appears to be getting little more than 50 cents' worth on the municipal operating dollar. That is a startling situation which St. Louis has the means to remedy by the establishment of a municipal efficiency or research bureau supported by citizens and independent of official authority as heretofore urged by the Post-Dispatch.

But the lesson to be driven home to St. Louisans by the completion of Cleveland's auditorium is that the Ohio metropolis, by going into debt, is enjoying things that we are not, and is supplying new springs of growth which we are doing without. And she is doing it on less than half the taxes St. Louis is paying. If St. Louis leaders have any fight in them these facts should bring it out. The most effective protection of public money and property values in a city and the foundation of growth are not to be secured by sealing up the public purse but by investing judiciously. The record of Cleveland proves this.

If waiting travelers at Union Station must be forced on the sights of St. Louis, why not serve them said sights on the movie picture screen that is causing all the fuss?

"THE GREATEST STRIKE."

With only a few days of grace left in which to compromise their difference and at least effect a truce, the coal miners and operators are getting ready for war. If either side recognizes the gravity of the struggle neither gives an indication of it. Both seem determined and eager to fight it out.

President Lewis of the United Mine Workers passes in the rush of the General Policy Committee's final preparations to say it will be "the greatest strike in history." Yet the prospective Armageddon does not cool his blood or constrain him to undertake some final effort for peace. And if there is anybody on the operators' side corresponding in official prestige to Lewis, he is equally guilty. Indeed, the genius of the operators has been exercised in devising excuses and evasions seemingly calculated to make the strike inevitable.

Doubtless both sides are confident of winning. But if the contest develops into "the greatest strike in history" both sides will lose. An Armageddon in the coal industry will do for that industry what the World War did for the divine right of Kings. Yesterday's news told us that William Hohenzollern is drinking water with his meals because he cannot afford wine. But not quite eight years ago the Kaiser was cocksure he was going to win a short, snappy war. He was about as cocksure as the leaders of the coal miners now are, or as the operators are.

"The greatest strike in history" will necessarily be waged at a staggering cost. Its finish probably will see the coal operator obliterated. The Government will assume the office of operating the coal mines. The miners will be losers, too, as well as the operators.

Of course, the operators do not expect "the greatest strike in history." Neither did William Hohenzollern expect the greatest war in history.

Written for the POST-DISPATCH By Clark Muddams

THE feat of Col Replogle was to give military criticism the quality of literature. Not many learning but distinction in style and purity of diction made the Colonel pre-eminent among war writers in the English-speaking world. Like most British writers of the first rank the Colonel has come to this country to see and be seen. He came over at the time of the disarmament conference which event considerable correspondent in England, France, Japan and the United States attended. The only one of these Britons who has persistently refused to be exhibited in America is Bernard Shaw. Arthur Grigg, London correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, went to see Shaw, and it was to him the Armagnac made the sensational remark:

"I shall fly to the United States. I would be attended."

* * *

Nevertheless, let us hope that now Debs is free Shaw will feel that he can come over and lash us for our shortcomings. He is abundantly able to do it, and goodness knows we need to have it done. We are no more able to see ourselves than any people have been. We need to have them hold up the mirror to us, and show it pays pretty well there is no reason why we should not be well looked after in this respect.

* * *

For instance, there is Mrs. Asquith. Mrs. Asquith has some definite impressions of us, and nobody is going to intimidate her. Both she were and my self were tried and failed. She thinks, among other things, that we are about the hardest people she ever saw. Most of us look upon Pennsylvania and West Virginia as benighted regions, but possibly think of ourselves as touched but humane. Mrs. Asquith discovered neither quality in us. The United States looks to her like Sparta. The Federal prison at Leavenworth filled with political prisoners, pacifists, Gullivor Gandhis, Socialists and labor agitators such as England used to deport to Australia in the famous prison ships, was to her what Siberia was to the Czars.

Recently a Kentuckian who observed that cute animal was dancing under a barnback set a trap for what he thought was possibly a mink and caught—a mongoose. Naturally this has caused some excitement. The mongoose comes from India. It has been imported to Cuba and Porto Rico, but never to the United States. Among ornithologists the alarm is as great as our own would be did a foreign army land upon one of our coasts. They say if the mongoose secures a foothold in the United States it will sound the death knell of all our ground-nesting birds. No explanation has been advanced for the appearance of the single specimen found in Kentucky. The identification was made positive by Government mammalogists, to whom the mongoose was sent. The animal is about the size of a mink, and yellowish-gray in color.

A Washington correspondent thinks the election from Northwestern will probably make the United States Senate a poor man's club, but there is no danger. To begin, a poor man cannot supply the money necessary to nomination. We may learn him there, without wondering how he could meet the expectations of him in the campaign for election. It is thus this has made the Senate a branch of the Government of, by and for the rich. Very few men have been able to get there upon their own resources, but the resources of the great predatory interests have been available to those willing to get there by some hook or crook. Senator McKellar of Tennessee, who knows quite well that the Senate cannot become anything different than it is if Senators are to be elected in the usual way, has proposed to his opponent in his campaign for renomination that neither man spend a cent nor permit a cent to be spent in his behalf. If that could be done, the Senate might become a poor man's club, but Senator McKellar's opponent has not said—yet.

Dear Just a Minute:

Can you get any of your sign hounds to find out for me what has become of the old wooden Indians that used to adorn the front of our cigar stores? Where have they gone? In my ramblings over the streets of St. Louis recently I haven't seen a single wooden Indian. I wish you would please institute an inquiry. It is possible they have all been removed to some reservation to me now unknown, or have they at last been gathered to their forefathers in the Happy Hunting Grounds?

I will thank you or any of your high-brow following for any light they can throw on this dark subject. I trust the inquiry is not without some utilitarian value. Only the other day I went into a certain store to buy some shoe wares but the store turned out to be a confectionery. I got to thinking that had my old wooden Indian friend of fond boyhood days been somewhere around I should not have made so egregious a blunder.

Literal Construction.

Stranger: Are the waiters here attentive to you, Miss?

Pretty Cashier: Sir-r-r!

Stranger: Oh, no offense, miss—no offense, I assure you. I was merely carrying out the instructions printed on the bill of fare: "Please report any inattention of waiters to the cashier." I thought if they were inattentive to you, I would report them, that's all.—Boston Transcript.

WHAT MADE CHICAGO, ILL.?

You speak of funny notions,
As people always will—
But here is one to ponder:
What made Chicago, Ill.?
—Cedartown (Ga.) Standard.

"I only cannot tell you,
Good friend, as man to man—
But though I cannot answer,
I know Topeka Kan."
—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Topeka answered coldly:
"I dread a task like this.
If you want it answered boldly
Try a Biloxi, Miss."
—Illinois State Register.

"Why, yes, I'll tell it boldly
To you three gentlemen:
Biloxi lays it solely
To a Philadelphia, Penn."

"Oh, bunk that stuff," says Phil'a.
"I'm old and too forlorn
To bear that burden silly—
It sounds like Hartford, Conn."

But Hartford, also "cranky",
Refused to name its "Pa";
So wrote with fingers shaky:
"For an Atlanta, Ga."

"It comes from blue sky bubbles,"
Atlanta says, "By gosh!"
She needs for her old troubles
A strong Seattle, Wash."

"She's most too ill affected," Seattle says, "I'll pass;
A Pope's just been elected—
Let's try a Boston, Mass."

But Boston, old as Noah,
Consigns her to embarra
Upon a briny tour
In a Texarkana, Ark.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publications, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

DEMOCRACY IN DANGER.

JESSE W. BARRETT, Missouri's Attorney-General, on restriction of individual and community rights.

THE American principle is to restrict individualism as little as possible. It was intended that the individual should be left with all freedom consistent with the freedom of others, that the local community should be the favorable host of government, taking from the individual only those rights which were necessary for the fencing of a body politic; that the state should take from the local community only those powers necessary to bind the local communities together into a state, and that the states, in turn, should transmit to the Federal Government only that part of their sovereign power necessary to form an indestructible union of states. Also for the change that has come! The states have surrendered power after power to the Federal Government until the doctrine of states' rights is believed by many to be obsolete and almost every function which the state exercises is being duplicated by the Government at Washington. The state, in turn, takes over the duties of counties and towns. The smaller units of government absorb the powers and privileges of the individual. The individual's duties and rights are brought almost to the vanishing point. Government gets further and further from the individual and from the local community, and as it does so, the less becomes its force and strength. Home rule is the essence of liberty. Self-government is the corner stone of American institutions. The real power of every Government is in its smallest units. Atrophy and dry-rot spread to Government as well as to individuals. The wreck of every nation in the past has come from the concentration of power at one central point and the loss of power by the units which should have given it force. For the good of Government, as well as for the good of self, the individual must be covetous and jealous of his rights. That state is healthy where the smallest unit resists the encroachment by the larger on any of its rightful powers. Government is at its best only when the individual holds fast to his prerogatives, the local community insists upon control of its own affairs, and the states resist surrender to the Federal Government of the foreign functions which are properly theirs.

MUSICAL EDUCATION OF PUBLIC.

From the Columbus Dispatch.

EDWARD BOK not long since established a prize of $10,000 and a gold medal to be awarded each year to the one who shall have rendered the most notable service to the city of Philadelphia. For the year just past, the prize has been awarded to Dr. Leopold Stokowski, director of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Stokowski has made the orchestra, it is said, an effective medium for the musical education of the masses. There can be no question that a popular appreciation of good music works to the interest of good citizenship. Shakespeare was quite generally right in his comments on human nature, and while there are doubtless exceptions, he was on the right side when he said:

"The man who hath no music in his soul,
And is not moved by concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils."

We hope the time may come, without too long waiting, when Columbus may have more of the benefit of high-grade music, orchestral and otherwise, widely and cheaply disseminated among those who care to hear, or by wise leadership can be made to care.

DITRICHSTEIN AGAIN THE ETERNAL AMORIST

His Finesse and Distinction in "The Great Lover," Comedy of Operatic Folk.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

THAT eminent virtuoso in amour, Jean Paurel, in Leo Ditrichstein's distinguished impersonation, is illustrating the fine art of lady-killing this week at the Shubert-Jefferson, where the Hungarian actor's most congenial comedy, "The Great Lover," opened a week's engagement last night. An audience of moderate numbers relished to the full not only the finesse of the star's performance, but the play's witty picture of the mercurial, malicious, dangerous and superstitious folk who inhabit grand opera. The work, by Frederick and Fanny Hattop, was last seen here about six years ago.

Paurel (Victor Maurel?) is a famous baritone of mature years, whose conquests among the fair sex in all lands and climes have won for him the soubriquet which provides the play's title. As the comedy opens, he arrives for his American debut at the Gotham (Metropolitan) Opera House in New York, presided over by Mr. Stapleton (Col. Mapleson?).

The opening scene, in the manager's office, is one of those episodes which bring the operatic manager's gray hairs down in sorrow to the grave. Dr. Mueller, the conductor of German opera, is at war with the musicians of the orchestra; and Maestro Cereale, the Italian conductor, is at war on general principles. Carl Losseck, German tenor, is embattled with the German soprano, Mme. Treller-Beinbrich (Marcella Sembrich?), over the madame's poodle, which barks at him when he sings during rehearsals. Madame replies that her poodle, having spent the summer at Beyreuth, where it never barked once, is an infallible critic of Wagnerian opera. Then tenor and soprano unite forces to war against the Italian prima donna, Giulia Sabittini.

Storm Replies to Storm.

Mme. Sabittini puts on a tornado of her own on learning that she is to make her first appearance with Paurel. He was an old flame, of two-score years ago, and she has never forgiven his fickleness. "Paurel a gentleman? Bah! He used to be a machman!" Paurel answers with another hurricane when informed that he is to share his premiere with Mme. Sabittini. "I am a gentleman, and cannot tell everything. But"—— and here follow details of unreserved raciness. No; he will make his debut only with Miss Ethel Warren, a young American lady of the most charming whom he met on the boat. She is unknown; yes, but —— Jean Paurel—— I will make her famous overnight.

Sparapini, the buffo tenor, enters in deepest dejection. He demands that the director protect him from the pursuit of an amorous lady. He cannot be her friend; she is driving him to distraction; he has two wives already. All of these incidents are delivered in the temperamental polyglot of the opera house—French, German, Italian, barbarous English, even Russian; while the manager mops a delirious brow and rends his hair.

This gentleman is a statesman and diplomat, however, and apparently all is smoothed out in the two weeks elapsing before the second act, which takes place in Paurel's dressing room. The opera company is singing Mozart's "Don Giovanni"—which, by the way, is not pronounced "Gee-o-vanne-y." From behind the stage come strains of the immortal duet, "La ci darem la mano," between Don Giovanni and Zerlina. Paurel enters after this triumph, pursued by the acclamations of other singers and of doting society women.

Paurel Loses His Voice.

But Paurel's throat is ailing, and to his superstitious horror, a young rival, Carlo Sonino, has been observed in the wings, dressed for the part, and waiting "for my voice to break down." It does not lessen his rage that Sonino is also enamored of Miss Warren, for whom "The Great Lover" has conceived the "one pure passion of my life." Mme. Sabittini storms in; and during a tempestuous row with that vengeful termagant, in which much furniture is smashed, Paurel discovers that he has lost his voice. Sonino's beautiful tones come from the stage, in Don Giovanni's serenade, "Deh! vieni alla fenestra," as the defeated tenor wrings his hands and blames it all upon the loss of his calamita, or charm, which, until tonight, he has always worn in a red bag about his neck.

The third and last act, several days later, is in Paurel's room at his hotel. It proves that his voice is irretrievably departed; but he consoles himself with a great trunk stuffed with love letters, and above all with thoughts of his honeymoon with Miss Warren, who, in a moment of pique, has discarded Sonino and engaged herself to his elderly rival.

There comes Sonino's mother, Bianca Sonino, who, as is not unexpected, also proves to have been an old inamorata of the insatiable Paurel. Under the flame of her scorn for his selfishness and self-indulgence, Paurel resolves upon the great renunciation. For once he will set the noble part. He will give up his "one, pure passion," and restore Miss Warren to Carlo.

The Rake's Tragedy.

Upon Paurel falls the tragedy of the Don Juan. Just as many opera singers get too old to sing by the time they have learned to act, so the rake develops the art of wooing to the highest degree of executancy, only to find that his hair is gray and that the young maiden upon whom he would lavish his veteran skill demands less technique and more brio.

The sacrifice accomplished, Paurel sits among the ruins of his life, exalted, however, by reflections upon his grandeur of conduct. The telephone rings. It is the young widow, with the big flashing eyes and little feet, who visited the baritone in his dressing room on the night of his triumph and defeat. The incorrigible amorist instantly comes to life.

"What are you doing this evening?" we hear him ask. "Nothing; then let's do it together. Where? You know the city better than I do. The road to New Rochelle? And turn up a hill? Yes! Do you prefer an open car or a closed one?" And so the curtain falls.

The star is supported by a capital company, able to portray to life the types represented in the cast. Many foreign names are in the list, such as William Ricciardi, Ugo Ventrella, Alexis Pollianov and Raphiella Ottiano.

Society News

Delaplaine, Mrs. Morton Jordan, Mrs. William Engelbach.

FLORENCE LAWRENCE IS STILL A STAR

"Unfoldment" Teaches Value of Faith—"The Conquering Power" and "Ladies Must Live" Also on View.

FLORENCE LAWRENCE, who antedated Mary Pickford as "queen of the movies," makes an impressive comeback this week after a nine-year absence from the screen. The picture, on view at the West End Lyric and Empress is "The Unfoldment." St. Louis capital was enlisted in its making. It is a powerful drama with a distinctly religious tinge and with some wonderful groupings illustrating Biblical scenes. Miss Lawrence received her screen training as a member of the old Biograph organization, which was the mother of many stars. In sheer acting ability she is far superior to many of the later crop of film actresses of the flapper type. Here she has the role of society and movie editor of a newspaper. The publisher has a past that is unfit for publication and the city editor is an outspoken atheist, as is also his invalid brother. In a fall down a stairway the publisher's beautiful daughter is injured and doctors and nurses tell her she will never walk again.

The young newspaper woman is given a free hand in writing the scenario for a film designed to further the election of a candidate supported by the publisher. She decides to throw discretion to the winds and produce a picture which will reform the publisher and bring the light of faith into the lives of the atheist brothers. This picture within a picture is the big feature of "The Unfoldment." In it are most of the characters of the main story, transformed so as to show their weaknesses and defects. Here the remarkable Bible groupings are introduced. There is a faith-healing note when the publisher's daughter walks after seeing the picture. It also works the spiritual regeneration of the publisher and the atheist brothers. The cast is excellent and Miss Lawrence gives a fine interpretation to the leading role.

Film Based on a Balzac Novel.

"The Conquering Power," a picture based on the novel, "Eugenie Grandet," and featuring those comely stars, Rudolph Valentino and Alice Terry, is at the Missouri Theater this week.

A scenario writer, thinking to improve upon Balzac's masterpiece, has introduced important changes in the story. The Cruchots, des Grassins and Nanon have been relegated to minor influences, and several artifices borrowed from dime novels have been grafted upon this massive work of genius. The story has been furnished with a "happy ending;" that is to say, the very end and purpose of Balzac has been scrapped completely, and Charles Grandet is united to Eugenie in the fashion of the silliest boarding school romance.

Only an enthusiast could pronounce the changes beneficial. The fact is that they are inferior to the original in precisely the degree that a studio hack is inferior to the great master of French fiction. On the other hand, the picture retains enough of the original to raise it above the average. Not confronted by the contrast between original and adaptation, one could pronounce it an unusually good romance of the screen. It is the comparison between "Eugenie Grandet" and "The Conquering Power" that is deadly to the latter.

The piece is superbly photographed and furnished. The incidents are well handled, and there is present a commendable terseness which is rare on the screen. Some grisly and very effective symbolism accompanies the death of the miser, Grandet, whose character has been preserved fairly intact.

George Loane Tucker's Last Film.

"Ladies Must Live," the week's feature at the New Grand Central, was started by the late George Loane Tucker, but he died before it was cut and edited for screening, so that it is difficult to tell what portion of it was his work and what portion was done by others. It is ambitious and extravagant, but rather confusing. It will delight those who demand little more of a picture than the showing of beautiful women in elaborate gowns. It also has some fine scenic settings to recommend it. It is merciless in its exploitation of the unlovely traits of feminine character to be found among certain classes of climbers and members of the "divorce set." The central idea seems to be that some women by reason of their early training and environment can see no other goal than acquiring wealth through marriage. These are contrasted with women of another type whom the author represents as forced to bend themselves to the wills of unworthy men through sheer necessity of obtaining a livelihood. Betty Compson has the leading feminine role of the woman who throws herself into a man's arms because she believes him to be rich. The part is a rather ungracious one which does not show this fair luminary of the screen in her best light. The picture has a depressing effect, which, however, is quickly dispelled by Buster Keaton's screamingly funny comedy, "The Boat," in which many will see the real feature of this week's program.

All-Star Cast in Cabanne Film.

A remarkable all-star cast is seen in "Beyond the Rainbow," at the Liberty. This is a William Christy Cabanne production interpreted by Harry Morey, Lillian (Billy) Dove, Virginia Lee, Diana Allen, James Harrison, Macey Harlam, Rose Coghlan, William Tooker, Helen Ware, George Fawcett, Marguerite Courtot, Edmund Breese, Walter Miller, Clara Bow and Huntley Gordon. In its earlier stages it is somewhat conventional in its telling of the story of the young stenographer who has a Cinderella chance to attend a "society" ball. But when the plot has worked thus far things of moment and novelty begin to happen. The host is mysteriously shot when the lights go out in the ballroom.

Here mystery piles on mystery and Edmund Breese, in the role of a detective, does some of the best character work of his career. His method of finding who fired the shot is highly original. It is an interesting story all the way.

An Irene Castle Film.

The opening feature of the week at the Delmar, Criterion and Congress is Irene Castle in "French Heels."

PASSION PLAY FOR HOLY WEEK

A Passion Play for Holy Week, entitled "The Nazarene," will be presented by students of the drama of St. Louis University at the university auditorium, Lindell boulevard, near Grand avenue, on the evenings of April 9, 10, and 11, with an afternoon presentation on April 9.

The play is from the pen of Charlemange Koehler, professor of dramatic art and public speaking of the university. "The Nazarene" is in five canticles, with a prologue embodying the prophecy of Jeremiah. The play proper is descriptive of the betrayal of Christ, his trial, condemnation, crucifixion and resurrection.

MISS SARAH M'GUIRE, SCHOOL PRINCIPAL, DIES

Had Been a Teacher in St. Louis for 45 Years—Was Ill Three Months.

Miss Sarah A. McGuire, 62 years old, principal of the Jefferson School, Ninth and Wash streets, died at St. John's Hospital today from nephritis, following an illness of three months. She had been a member of the teaching corps of the St. Louis public schools for 45 years.

Miss McGuire began as a teacher at the Webster School in 1877 and later taught at the Lowell School. She was promoted to be principal in 1889 and after serving in that capacity at the Ashland School for nine years was transferred to the Jefferson School.

Aside from her duties as principal she was active in social work and at the Jefferson School, where a large percentage of the pupils are children of foreign-born residents, she rendered valuable assistance in Americanization work.

She is survived by a nephew, Patrolman Kenneth P. McGuire, with whom she resided at 4569 Oakland avenue.

MAJOR JOSEPH C. BRADY DIES

Retired U. S. Army Officer Succumbs at His Home Here.

Maj. Joseph C. Brady, U. S. A., retired, died today of paralysis at his home, 2915 Allen avenue. He was 45 years old.

He enlisted as a Second Lieutenant at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, and after the war was transferred to the regular army, serving nine years in the Philippines and later on the Mexican border. He was Provost-Marshal in the Canal Zone during the World War. He was retired at Jefferson Barracks in November, 1919. The widow, Mrs. Eunita Appler Brady, and his mother, Mrs. Claire Wellge Brady, survive.

KIRKWOOD'S MAYOR TO RETIRE AFTER 10 YEARS OF SERVICE

Joseph R. Matthews, president of the National Oats Co., has declined to accept renomination as Mayor of Kirkwood and will retire April 4, after having served as the city's chief executive for 10 consecutive years. Matthews was renominated Saturday, and had no opposition, but declined to accept, because of the press of business affairs.

A Nominating Committee, composed of one member from each of the city's four wards, will propose a successor to Matthews at a meeting to be held tomorrow night.

Browns to Keep Ten Hurlers and Six Infielders

Manager Fohl Still Carrying 31 Men, but Expects to Release Four Pitchers and Two Receivers.

TEAM TO HAVE STRONG SUBSTITUTE MATERIAL

Club Goes to New Orleans This Week for Important Contests, Two of Them With the Cardinals.

By J. Roy Stockton,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PENSACOLA, Fla., March 27.—Bill Mullen, recruit infielder, who made his second spring training trip with the Browns this year, has been released to Mobile of the Southern Association, Manager Fohl announced last night. This reduces the Brownie squad to 31 players, six over the limit which must be reached by May 15. Others who will feel the bite of the ax blade probably will be selected from the squad of 14 pitchers who still are on the roster.

Remaining on the list are five outfielders, Tobin, Williams, Jacobson, the regular outer patrol and Chick Shorten and Cedric Durst, utility fly-chasers. Shorten surely will be kept, while if Durst is sent away it is certain that a "string" will be attached to him. Although his hitting ability is doubtful, his fielding has been all that could be desired. The question is whether Fohl thinks he will profit more by sitting on the bench watching the big leaguer play or by going to a minor league, where he would be able to play every day under a smart teacher.

Mullen's release leaves three utility infielders. They are Jimmy Austin, Gene Robertson and Herman Bronkie. Fohl said last night he thought he would keep the three. If any departs the popular guess is that Bronkie will be the one.

May Carry 10 Hurlers.

Of the 14 pitchers on the staff six may be considered the probable regulars. They are Shocker, Davis, Vangilder, Bayne, Kolp and Danforth. Pruett, Wright, Henry and Meine also are believed to have a fair chance of being held for the acid test of big league competition.

Five catchers are still in camp and two of them are virtually certain to "get the gate." Severeid, Billings and Collins will be kept, while Heving and Watkins probably will be placed in minor league berths before the season starts. This means that four pitchers will be given the minor league air.

Fohl declines to decide at this early date. He says it's too early, but the consensus is that if all the slicing is done among the pitchers the four to get the gate for further seasoning will be Roy Davis, Elliott, Overlock and Dolan. Davis has been handicapped by illness. At the beginning of training he was praised as one of the brightest prospects. Elliott looks too good to be sent away without strings. If he had a better curve ball and more control he'd make a strong bid for a job right now. When he develops those two necessary assets his physique will make him an iron man.

Without any help from Fohl, therefore, the following roster looks like the best guess for May 15:

PITCHERS — Shocker, Davis, Vangilder, Bayne, Kolp, Danforth, Pruett, Meine, Henry and Wright.

CATCHERS—Severeid, Collins and Billings.

INFIELDERS—Sisler, McManus, Gerber, Ellerbe, Austin and Robertson.

OUTFIELDERS — Tobin, Williams, Jacobson, Shorten and Durst. If Durst is sent away, Bronkie will be kept.

Yesterday's rain, which prevented the second game of the series with Louisville, was welcomed by the Browns. The one hope last night was that the hovering clouds would bring more rain today, so it would be unnecessary to play on the treacherous field here. If the game is played Fohl will use three or four pitchers, as he fears the chilly wind which sweeps in from the gulf. Davis and Danforth will work a few innings each.

Big Battles in New Orleans.

Tonight the squad will depart for New Orleans, where games will be played with New Orleans tomorrow and Wednesday, St. Paul Thursday and Friday and with the Cardinals Saturday and Sunday. These games with the Cardinals are the objective for which the Browns have been pointing.

Shocker will pitch the first game and the Fohlmen figure that that game and the first one at St. Louis, which Shocker will also pitch, are as good as won.

They base their confidence on the fact that Shocker, always a wonderful pitcher, is in better condition this spring than he ever has been in the training period.

Bill Mullen did not grieve over his release to Mobile. He came down with the Browns camp two weeks ahead of the first squad. He was a star with Mobile last season and soon is to be married to a Mobile girl. The Browns believe he will always be a star in the association, though unable to quite make the grade in the majors due to his hitting weakness.

Pensacola paid Louisville $2000 for training here. Manager and players are sore in arm and mind. The advertising Pensacola gets out of that $2000 will be just opposite to what they hoped for when the Chamber of Commerce made the bid. Thirty miles of paved streets, parks, etc., are the things ball players never notice. But that eye-bruising ball park will linger in their memory always.

No Charley Horses for Fohlmen.

Fohl was asked if any of the boys complained of sore arms after Saturday's game. "I never had a sore arm on my team in my career as manager," he replied. "That's one thing I watch. One workout a day is enough and I never let them get near the sore-arm stage." That's a broad statement, but it is known to be true this season.

Tobin on Batting.

Johnnie Tobin, considered the greatest place hitter in the league today, chatted about batting last night. He said he had found it possible to place hits against even the best pitchers.

"You have to stand up here flat-footed and push the bat at the ball," said John. "Of course you have to be lucky. But if you keep trying you'll plunk a lot of hits 'where they ain't,' whereas if you just whale away at the fence you'll give the outfielders a mess of flies between each one you land safe.

"In bunting you have to use judgment, particularly if you'll watch the infield and get away from the plate fast you can fatten your average frequently with swinging bunts. And whenever you catch the infield flat-footed and get to first before the ball is touched, you have scored a bull's-eye on the other team's morale. That does more to rattle a pitcher and an infield than anything else you can do. It's a heap better than putting one over the fence."

Last of the Federals.

Tobin is the only member of the Browns remaining from the old Federal League team. The story of his return to the Browns is interesting. Rickey sent him to Salt Lake before the 1917 season opened. Rickey later jumped to the Cardinals and Bob Quinn became business manager of the Browns. The team needed outfielders badly and Bob was scouring the minors for material. In the course of a tour of the Coast League he saw Salt Lake in action and watched the team for several days.

After satisfying himself that he had found what he wanted he called at the Salt Lake office and told Cook that he wanted to buy one of the club's outfielders. When Quinn told him it was Tobin, Cook thought that it was a joke and informed Quinn that Tobin was the property of the Browns.

"Well, what the blazes is he doing out here?" Quinn asked. Efforts were made to bring Tobin back instanter, but Johnnie wanted to see the Pacific Coast and insisted on playing out the season with Salt Lake. Thereafter, however, he was a regular in the Brownie outfield.

He is considered one of the best in the business.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Wise and Otherwise.

BASEBALL critics are already sharpening their rowels preparatory to riding Branch Rickey whip and spur. Blaming Rickey has been a most popular pastime with some baseball writers, whenever these found time to quit the golf links and view an occasional ball game.

We note already in the writings of several that the Cardinals are expected to have a great pennant chance, if illness or some other mishap should keep Rickey away from the ball field for a month or so.

The following appeared in a baseball periodical, penned by a well-known writer:

"Our valiant athletes (the Reds) are banking on St. Louis coming through with the National League honors. They believe that the New York pitching staff will surely crack, and they hold that the Cardinals have the real power, the genuine stuff to carry a club to victory.

"That team, so the Reds agree, can outhit all rivals, can field well enough for all practical purposes, and has better pitchers than most people imagine. It may be cruel to say it, but the Reds all unite in this playful quip: 'If Branch Rickey should be taken sick for a month this summer, his club will have the pennant won before he can start managing again.'"

The author probably is attributing to the Reds his own sarcasms, as baseball players as a rule are not so unkind.

* * *

Facts and Fiction.

THE real facts in Rickey's case entirely contradict the view that he is not a successful leader, —both as a team and as a business executive.

Rickey, up to last year, was the brains as well as the motor of the new Cardinal machine. His genius helped set the good ship afloat and keep it there in the troubled season of 1917, with war just declared.

His program since that time has been rather remarkable, if statistics mean anything. Mark the following FACTS, in place of the customary innuendoes:

In 1918 (still in war), the Cardinals finished last and were nearly $200,000 in debt.

In 1919 the club finished seventh and was $125,000 in debt.

In 1920 the club tied for fifth and was only $25,000 in debt.

In 1921 the club finished third, cleared off the last of its debts and made some money.

* * *

In accomplishing all this, Rickey made some wonderful deals, acquired some first-class players and developed at slight cost a team that today is seriously, if somewhat sneeringly, picked to run one-two in the race by over half the baseball handicappers.

Yet Rickey continues to be considered lightly as an effective manager. Those who hold this view are seemingly not in accord with the facts, which show him to be a fine judge of players, an indefatigable worker and a master in baseball diplomacy.

McHenry's Single Gives Cardinals Belated Victory

Rickey's Men Forced to Travel 11 Innings to Defeat Houston, 4-3.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 27.—Only a stirring rally by the Cardinals prevented their defeat yesterday by the Houston club of the Texas League. Rather, it was a series of rallies, for the Cardinals tied the count twice before winning out in the eleventh, 4—3. For the first seven innings the fans might have believed the Buffs the major league club, for, in that period they had all the better of the argument. Each team used two pitchers. For Houston Pearson, a veteran right-hander went five innings in splendid style, permitting but three hits and not a single run. Bill Bolden relieved him and the Cardinals got to him for the decision.

Barnes was touched up often by the Buffs, but though he gave eight hits in seven innings, only one run was recorded against him, because of some snappy fielding at critical moments. Bill Bailey worked the last four and had his glove and a horseshoe, but little else. The outfielders of both teams were legweary when the game ended. Fourteen Cardinals died by the aerial route, while eight of the enemy perished in like manner.

Mueller was the principal hitter for St. Louis. Hornsby got but one hit. That was a double and came in most opportunely in the eleventh for it put him in a position to score the winning run on McHenry's single. McHenry's other hit helped to tie the count.

Houston Scores in Second.

First blood went to the Buffs in the third inning. Pearson, the pitcher, unexpectedly singled and was sacrificed to second. He sailed to third on an infield out and counted easily on a double by Gross. The longer the game went the bigger this run looked. Bolden, once with the Cardinals, did the pitching after the fifth and in the sixth and seventh held the St. Louisans helpless.

Slight signs of life on the Cardinal team were noticed in the eighth. Toporcer, who played short in Lavan's place, got a base hit to right and, on a passed ball, took second. Ainsmith put him on third with a sacrifice and Cliff Heathcote, hitting for Barnes, sent out a long fly on which Toporcer scored.

With Bailey pitching in the eighth, Houston assumed a lead which appeared to be quite sufficient. Bailey issued a pass to Denoville and Whiteman sacrificed. Ray Blades, winner of the Post-Dispatch Public School baseball prize some years ago, wafted one of Bailey's fast ones over the left field wall.

Cardinals Tie Score in Ninth.

The Cards had some task in the ninth, but they squeaked through. Fournier began by hitting to right for a base, but the Cardinal cause looked hopeless when Stock forced the Frenchman and Hornsby flied out. Mueller singled to center and Stock scored when McHenry planted a safety in left. Toporcer kept things going with a hit on which Mueller raced across.

The Cardinals-athletics series starts today with a game in Galveston.

Yesterday, in the Gulf town the second team beat the Sandcrabs, 11—2. The Texas Leaguers could do nothing with North, Pfeffer and Haines.

Australians Ask for Date.

By the Associated Press.

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 27.—The Australasia Tennis Association has sent a cable message to the Belgian Tennis Association proposing that the Australian and Belgian teams play the first round in the Davis Cup matches about June 26 in New York. The message added that if the Belgian Association agreed to this the Australians would cable the American Association to fix a date for the games.

TERRY, CUB INFIELDER, OUT WITH BROKEN WRIST

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 27.—Zeb Terry, second baseman of the Chicago Nationals, suffered a fracture of his right wrist in practice here yesterday just before the Cubs started a game which resulted in their defeating the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, 6 to 2.

Score: Chicago, 6-11-1; Los Angeles, 2-11-2. Batteries—Alexander and Hartnett; Hughes, Ponder and Bailey.

Eisel Defeats Dils.

Gus Eisel, Missouri middleweight wrestling champion, won in straight falls from Homer Dils, Arkansas, at the Rock Springs A. C. yesterday. Eisel won the first fall in 44 minutes with a leg scissors and toe hold and the second in 25 minutes with a headlock. In the preliminaries, Fred Hall won from Al Boesung, while Carl Ambruster downed Frank Ensslace.

Among Us Golfers.

(Copyright, 1922.)

I HAVE my own opinion as to who gets most of the fun out of golf, but many dispute its accuracy. By fun I mean not necessarily laughter and humor, but relaxation and physical pleasure. We have all seen the different types. We'll see them this spring.

There are the top-notch players, who take the game seriously, and who through application and a desire to excel have achieved a sort of a mastery of mind over muscle that enables them to play at top form no matter how exciting the conditions and how strenuous the outlook. They commit golfing errors just often enough to maintain a bond of sympathy with lesser lights, but there is a mechanical perfection in their work that is at times tiresome and even monotonous to a gallery.

I know that when watching the play of skilled golfers from the gallery, hole after hole, I, too, have lost the thrill of seeing the perfect drive, the accurate approach and the precise putt. A topped ball or a trapped drive or some error is the only thing that restores interest in the game.

Regarding the nerve control of leading players they undoubtedly acquire this in a very pronounced degree. Early in my golf career it used to be exceedingly difficult for me to sleep the night before an important match, but with experience this feeling wore off, and it has now been a long time since a golf match could rob me of a sound slumber. When the match itself starts I am conscious of a thrill of excitement which, however, has a tendency to steady my play and make it better rather than to produce a case of "nerves" and result in bad shots. I imagine this must be the experience of every golfer who has played long before galleries.

There is the mass of ordinary golfers who play the game partly for health and relaxation and partly because they enjoy the friendly competition. This class plays a keen game of golf, and displays many of the virtues and weaknesses of human nature. In this class you will see the man who plays his best golf when he is being beaten.

The man of this type is pretty likely to be an individual who succeeds in more important occupations. He is the man who can sink a 12-foot putt on the eighteenth hole and pull the chestnuts out of the fire. In this same class of golfers comes the man who can't play if he isn't winning. This is probably due to his mental make-up, but he makes a hard partner in a close match.

Then there comes the third class of golfers who play the game for exercise and fresh air, but not seriously. It is possible that they are the players who get the most out of golf, though I don't think so. They have no great desire to excel and therefore they are usually mediocre players, but inferiority doesn't affect their tempers. In this class are golfers who could play better if they would, but they haven't the ambition and are content with success in other fields. Here again it is a question of human nature working to the surface. A man succeeds in golf pretty much in proportion to the effort and will power he puts into the game. Those of my readers who attempt to fit themselves into any of these groups may be pretty sure that they are in that class largely because they wish to be.

CARDINAL BALLPLAYERS AID IN FIGHTING FIRE

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 27.—Branch Rickey's St. Louis Cardinals, major league baseball players, turned firemen when a building here, used as a nurses' quarters for the Baptist Sanitarium caught fire yesterday.

Passing the burning building the ballplayers jumped from the taxicab in which they were riding and went to the rescue of women in the building.

Three night nurses were asleep in the building when the fire broke out. They rushed out of the house in their night clothes. All escaped unhurt with the exception of slight burns received by one of the trio.

The property damage was slight, much of the furniture being saved by the St. Louis players.

High School Ball Squads Are Under Pruning Process

General Cutting Down in Number of Candidates in Progress at the Camps.

A general cutting down of the amount of baseball talent is in progress in the preparatory school training camps. The morning glories and "the not so goods" are being herded out by the high school coaches and the various squads cut down to such proportions as can be readily handled.

At Cleveland High, Bert Fenenga, the diamond boss, has given some thirty outfield candidates the gate. Fenenga centered his attention during the past week on his garden men and has now decided that the fly-chasing job will be between Bishop, Gleavie, Seleben, Brenner and Mills. The Carondelet coach is now paying strict attention to his fifteen aspirants for pitching honors. The mainstay in the box will be Reinhardt, assisted by a southpaw named Steiber and Brunner and Hathaway, right-handers.

Cleveland is well supplied with catching material. Max Starkloff, the first-string man, will receive help from Williams, Crane and Hellinger, all of whom have shown considerable ability. The initial sack is being hotly contested for, Hathaway, Kaiser, Creely, Shaumberg, Huntington are all likely looking first sackers and the ultimate award will rest between them. Scheller and Meader have distanced all rivals at the second station and will be flanked at short by either Leipold, Brown or Rumer. At third base, Pickering and Carlo are the most likely contenders although there are a number of candidates seeking to displace these boys.

Two Games for Practice.

The Carondelet squad has arranged games with Eden Seminary for Thursday and with Jefferson Barracks the following week in an effort to be on edge for the opening game of the season against Yeatman, April 8.

Yeatman High is plugging along steadily. Coach Hill has at last succeeded in securing grounds in Fairground Park and is specializing on the hitting end of the game. The North Ender is satisfied with the defense tactics of his squad and now hopes to develop a slugging crew. Yeatman has also arranged a game with Eden for this week.

The McKinley squad of 70 men has been reduced to about thirty by Coach Sheik. A workout and practice game at High School field Saturday morning is expected to result in a final decision by the coach on several selections and to result in further releases. Sheik has booked games with Concordia, Washington University and the Rhodes-Burford teams to place his players on edge for their opening against Soldan.

Zoeller, Applebaum and Dixon have shown the coach that they have pitching ability, and it is very probable that Sheik will retain the trio and assign the latter two as relief men for Zoeller. Hanley and Schilling are undoubtedly the class of the receivers. Hanley appears to have the better arm, but Schilling is a brainy receiver and this about evens the value of the men. At first base the coach has two leading candidates, Mulvaney and Sheik, the son of the mentor, the boys appear evenly matched and the regular assignment is a toss-up. Tommy Condon at second and Seluckey, a ball player of exceptional ability, at short are sure regulars. Third sack will be between Turner and Scharnbarger.

The Crimson outfield will be manned by Woods, Heffern, Syberg with Mulvaney as a relief man. The coach will also retain Hewer, Pullman and Beide as relief infielders.

Mike Walker has cast his veteran eye over more than 100 men who are seeking to carry the Red and Black to victory this season. At this time a great number have withered under the "once-over" and have been relegated to the also rans.

New Men of Promise.

Among the new material, two men stand out prominently. Orr, an outfielder, and Connor a first or second sacker, look like ball players of real high school standard. It is very probable that these two men will show as regular players when the Mid-City team opens with McKinley on April 15. Ranken Trade School, Western M. A. and Principia will be met prior to the league opening.

Nudelman, Rhell and Stiermark are battling for pitching honors. Fox has cinched the receiving and "Big Fred" Fisher has been shifted to first base. This move will place Connor at the keystone. Williamson at short and Fanning at third will complete the inner wall of Walker's defense. Capt. Olsen, Bruere and Orr seem to be the present pick of the outer gardeners.

Jimmie Cook is sending his Soldan squad through daily practice games and is slowly sifting the material. The West Enders show promise of presenting an evenly balanced ball club this year. The coach stated that he was well pleased with the showing of the aspirants to date.

CEDRIC DURST POUNDS OUT HOMER AND SINGLE IN BATTLE AT MOBILE

MOBILE, Ala., March 27.—Hitting the ball hard and taking advantage of the wildness of the Mobile pitchers, the Browns' Yannigans yesterday won the second game from the local team, 11 to 4. Both the regulars and the Yannigans of the Browns went undefeated during their stay in this city.

Coleman's squad proved a live bunch in the two games. They not only hit the ball well, but their fielding was high class.

In the game yesterday, Cedric Durst, who secured four safe blows on Saturday, came through with a home-run blow over the rightfield fence and a single. He played the centerfield position in great style.

Herman Bronkie, who played the second bag for the Browns in the two final games of the training season, showed that he still has the pep. Bronkie covered the bag in great shape and by making a running catch of a fly back of second base, saved Roy Davis from being scored on in the sixth when the bases were full.

PATSY FLANNAGAN AND JOEY SCHWARTZ MATCHED TO BATTLE AT ARMORY

Patsy Flannagan of St. Louis, having failed to lure Peewee Kaiser into a match, has accepted terms for a bout with Joey Schwartz of Detroit, to take place at the Armory, April 7, under the auspices of the Business Men's Athletic Club. The match calls for 12 rounds, 118 pounds at 2 o'clock.

Schwartz recently boxed 10 rounds with former Champion Johnny Ertle, the decision being a draw.

ST. PAUL FIVE SECOND IN A. B. C. TOURNAMENT

TOLEDO, O., March 27.—The name of E. Laplant of Milwaukee appears in three places in the list of first 10 of minor events of the American Bowling Congress tournament as the result of his good work on the tournament alleys Saturday night and yesterday.

Laplant bowled into seventh place in the singles with 677, his 648 in his doubles with E. Dankert gave the pair 1256 and ninth place in that event, and with his 573 Saturday night in his five-man event, gave him 1898 for third place in the all-events.

The St. Francis Hotel five of St. Paul went into second place in the team standings with a score of 2942.

Babe Ruth Is Injured.

NEW YORK, March 27.—John McGraw's world's champions have just received some glittering new watch fobs, as world series presents from Commissioner Landis. The New York Americans and Brooklyn Nationals were engaged in a contest over in New Orleans. The Brooklyn boys won, 8 to 5, due to the excellent hurling of "Dazzy" Vance, a former Yankee. Babe Ruth suffered a slight injury to his side while at bat in the third inning. He retired from the game in the fifth.

Skating Champion Entered.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Art Staff, champion professional ice skater, has entered the world's professional roller skating championship meet to be held here April 2 to 9. Heretofore Staff has skated in several roller events, as an amateur.

SALLY ON OUR ALLY.

OF all the girls that are so smart,
There's none like pretty Sally;
She is the darling of my heart
And she bowls on our alley.
She's always there with strike or spare
To make a noble tally;
She is the darling of my heart
And she bowls on our alley.

With other ladies that I know
I have no time to dally;
And that's including Bessie, Flo,
Felecia, Ann and Hally.
Though passing fair, they can't compare
With my beloved Sally;
She is the darling of my heart
And she bowls on our alley.

GOOD EYE!

Judge Landis says that the umpires need spring training. We knew they needed something, but didn't know what it was.

The women's annual handicap tournament is now on at the Washington alleys. Ten pins now hunting for hat pins.

The weather is like Uncle Sam's claims against the European nations: Unsettled.

But the indications are that the weather will be settled long before the claims.

Right now the condition of Bill Doak's arm is causing the good people of St. Louis more worry than the 4-power treaty.

"Bill to Charge Golf Players Fee Defeated." Headline. Nothing to worry about now but our stance.

A Memphis physician has brought suit against a man for referring to him in advertisements as "Mister." Could have been worse. Might have called him "Doc."

THE TENTMAKER.

See where Dimitroff is to wrestle Omar at the Coliseum this week. The interest is said to be in tents.

Frank Bruggy, sold by the Phillies to Portland, says he will retire rather than report to the minors. Indicating that Frank hasn't heard the news that the Pacific Coast is a major league.

Or maybe Frank is one of those guys who doesn't believe everything he sees in the papers.

"Pitchers are worrying Gon." The pitchers are worrying everybody as per their annual habit.

TOO TRUE.

If it weren't for the pitchers the managers would have nothing to worry about but their income tax reports.

The younger set of Seguin, Tex., gave the White Sox a farewell dance. Which is nothing compared to the merry dance the other teams are preparing to lead them.

Judge Landis, who has been working out down south, gives promise of being the leading "fast ball" pitcher of the country, not excepting Mayor Kiel.

See where the cheer leader of the Ohio State University has gone into active training. We take it that a high-class masseur will be employed to take the knots out of his vocal chords.

BRADY'S ELEVEN WINS FROM FOLEYS, 3-1, IN BENEFIT SOCCER GAME

The Bradys, made up mostly of Soulin players, yesterday defeated the Foleys, 3 goals to 1, in the Pete Ratican benefit soccer game at High School Field. A crowd of about 300 fans turned out. In the second half Harry Ratican, former St. Louisan, and the [illegible] center forward in the East, appeared in the lineup of the Foleys. His pass to Dunn made possible the only goal for the Foleys.

Elmer Schwarz, Jimmy Brannigan and Joe McCarthy scored for the Bradys. Two of the points came in the first period. Nolan, Peterson and Murphy, the Brady halfbacks, played sensationally, as did Burnett in goal.

The Bradys next Sunday will play an out-of-town eleven. This will close the soccer season.

The lineups:

Bradys (3).	Positions.	Foleys (1).
Burnett	Goal	[illegible]
T. Brady	Left back	[illegible]

Goals—Schwarz, Brannigan, McCarthy, Dunn. Time of halves—45m. Referee—Paul McSweeney and F. Kavanaugh.

Miss Wessbecker Leads.

Miss M. Wessbecker took the lead in the singles of the women's city handicap bowling tournament on the Washington alleys yesterday with a score of 588. She rolled 444 scratch and was helped by a handicap of 144 pins. Mrs. M. Kelly, with 507, rolled the best scratch total. In doubles Miss F. Birk and Miss M. McMahon are high with 1146, which included a donation of 345 pins. Mrs. E. von Bey with 1461 leads in all-events.

Schaefer Choice Over Hoppe; Little Money Is Risked

Former Champion's Manager Takes Even Money for $500 Wager, "Pete" Wires.

HOUSE COMPLETELY SOLD

Balkline Title-Holder and Challenger Will Split Receipts 60 and 40 Per Cent.

By Charles Peterson,
St. Louis Cue Expert and Referee of Former Billiard Championships.

CHICAGO, March 27.—What is generally regarded as the greatest billiard match arranged in years will begin here tonight, when Willie Hoppe will attempt to regain the world 18.2 balkline title from Jake Schaefer, who wrested the championship from Hoppe in a tournament last fall.

The men will play three nights in a total of 1500 points in blocks of 500 points. Herb Levis, who refereed the championship tournament, again will be the third man at the table. Besides a $1000 side bet, the winner of the match will take down 60 per cent of the gate receipts, the remainder to go to the loser. That this will be no mean item is evidenced by the fact that every seat for all three nights had been disposed of at an early hour this morning. The hall will seat approximately 1800 persons, besides a score or more of newspaper men who are here for the match.

Both Men Physically Fit.

It was impossible this morning to get an accurate report from Schaefer's camp as to the condition of the champion or regarding his playing. He has been resting up and practicing for the past two weeks at French Lick Springs, Ind., and the best that can be said about him is that he is ready.

The same goes for Hoppe, who, it is known, spent the past two weeks in St. Louis preparing himself for what is regarded as the greatest test he has ever faced.

A notable preskirmish feature is the lack of betting on the match and the short price at which the champion is quoted favorite here, in his home city. It is impossible for Hoppe backers to get better than 5 to [illegible] for their money and even at this short figure the Schaefer adherents hesitate to display their wealth. It is reliably reported that a good many small wagers have been made at even money. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that Schaefer is known to be a very inconsistent billiardist. R. It is reliably reported that a good many small wagers have been made at even money. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that Schaefer is known to be a very inconsistent billiardist. R. P. Benjamin, manager of Hoppe, succeeded in getting $500 placed on his man early today at even money.

"Benny" also announced he would risk some money that Schaefer would not make 1000 points, but nobody seemed interested.

Match Under Title Conditions.

Conditions governing tonight's match are practically identical with those which confronted the participants at the outset of the championship tournament. The table, cushions, cloth and ivories are brand-new. This, of course, is expected to make for slow play tonight, but more speed should be in evidence beginning tomorrow night, when the players accustom themselves to their surroundings.

The rules provide that in case either player runs out the first block the balls shall remain as they were at the finish and the player will resume shooting tomorrow night.

Can Willie Hoppe Come Back? Let Charley "Pete" Tell You

Widely Known Billiard Referee and All-Around Expert Player, Who Helped Prepare Hoppe for His Clash With Schaefer, Will Report Match for the Post-Dispatch.

WILLIE HOPPE, 17 years a billiard champion, holder today of two cue titles, but defeated last fall by "Young" Jake Schaefer for his 18.2 balkline laurels, will open a three-night's match at Chicago, beginning tonight, in an effort to regain his lost world's honors.

Charley Peterson, known intimately to many St. Louisans who play billiards and to the United States professionally, will report the play for the Post-Dispatch.

Peterson's stories of the national championship tournament last fall as well as his illustrations of interesting situations and shots will be remembered by Post-Dispatch readers.

Following are a few facts about the match, which opens tonight at Orchestra Hall, Chicago:

Principals—William F. Hoppe, New York; age, 33; 18.1 and 14.1 balkline champion. Jacob Schaefer, Chicago; age 24; 18.2 champion.

Points—Total 1500, with 500 to be played each night.

Style of play—18-inch balkline, one ball to be driven across a line on the second shot in balk.

Favorite—Wagers are at even money, although Schaefer is a popular choice in Chicago.

Challenger—If Hoppe loses, Schaefer must next defend his match against Welker Cochran of Manson, Ia., who finished third in the national tournament.

Referee—Herbert Levis, Chicago.

Purse—Players split gate receipts, 60 per cent to winner, 40 to the loser.

Reservations—All of the 1700 seats have been sold. August Busch is one of several St. Louisans to reserve table-side seats.

St. Leos Defeat Soccer Champions of Memphis, 11-0

Long Pass Employed by Local Title Winners Proved Too Much for Visitors.

The St. Leos, champions of the St. Louis Municipal Soccer League, drubbed the Young Men's Institute eleven, title winner of Memphis, 11 to 0, in an intercity game at Fairground yesterday. In a preliminary, the St. Matthews won the junior championship, trimming the St. Marks, 2-1. Despite the inclement weather about 3000 fans turned out.

The Southerners came here with a reputation of being the strongest eleven that ever represented Memphis in a contest. However, yesterday this was anything but true. The chief weakness of the visitors was in the backfield. The Y. M. I. team, which has several foreign-born athletes on its roster, tried the short pass on the heavy field, but this style of play failed dismally. The Leos used the long pass to advantage.

Leos Get Early Start.

The visitors made their best showing at the start of the game, rushing down field, but being stopped by the local fullbacks. The Leos tallied first five minutes after play started. Drew scoring. Three more goals were counted before the close of the first half. During the closing period, the Leos tallied five times. Hally, the Memphis halfback, booted a penalty kick far over the cross bars. This was Memphis' best chance to count in the second period.

The Municipal Association tendered the visiting athletes a banquet before their departure for home last night. The eleven departed at 10:30 o'clock.

The Y. M. I. eleven will get another chance against the Leos. Next Saturday and Sunday the local champions are scheduled to play at Memphis.

Yesterday's lineups:

St. Leos 11.	Positions.	Memphis (0).
Walkenford	Goal	Gunty
P. Burke	Fullback	Arnold
Hitchcock	Fullback	Bishop
Farmer	Halfback	Bassnett
Clark	Halfback	Hally
Kinealy	Halfback	Guinee
McGann	Forward	Joyce
Dooley	Forward	D. Walsh
J. Burke	Forward	Delpome
McMahon	Forward	Enap
Drew	Forward	Butts

Goals—Farmer (2), McGann (2), Dooley (2), J. Burke (2), Drew (2), Gunty (in own goal). Substitution—Ackermann for Guinee. Officials—Referee, M. J. Byrne; timer, Paul Murphy. Linesmen—J. Asmegr, J. Cradock, George Nieter, Dick Wall.

Two Birdies on One Hole Made by Golfer

By the Associated Press.

FRESNO, Cal., March 27.—Two birdies on the one hole was the remarkable record made on the Sunnyside Country Club golf links here yesterday by Gerald Thomas.

Teeing off from No. 5, Thomas made a beautiful drive, which sailed straight for the pin. One hundred and fifty yards down the fairway a flock of sparrows suddenly swooped into the course of the ball. Thomas' first "birdie" was registered when his ball decapitated one of the sparrows.

After pausing to mourn over the death of the sparrow, Thomas played a full mashie approach to the green. His ball rolled into the cup, giving him birdie No. 2. The hole is a par 3.

MONAHAN MAKES LUCKY PURCHASE; HIS REBUKE CAPTURES CUBAN DERBY

HAVANA, March 27.—Thomas Monahan is a lucky man. A few days ago he purchased from the Goldapple stable Billy Barton and Rebuke. On his first start Billy Barton won for his new owner and yesterday Rebuke, at odds of 7 to 1, captured the Cuban Derby here, worth $15,170 to the winner. Rebuke was coupled in the betting with Quesada, which finished third. Nine horses started over the mile and one-eighth course.

Yesterday's races closed the Havana season and the only park operating in America is at Tit Juana. Today is the first idle racing day in years, owing to the fact that Tia Juana does not race on Mondays.

Mose Goldblatt was the leading winner at Havana, with 41 victories aggregating $47,370 in purses. L. Penman, 68 victories, led the riders. During the meeting 671 races were run and purses aggregating $579,300 were hung up.

Todds Defeat Falcos.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Todd Ship Yards soccer team had an easy time defeating the Falcos of Holyoke at Todd Field in the American Soccer League series, 4 goals to 0. Black, center forward, scored the first three goals, while McKenna shot the last one.

Harrison Eleven Wins.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Harrison eleven defeated the Fall River team in an American Soccer League match at Harrison, N. J., yesterday, 1 goal to 0. Three minutes after the restart, Brown, playing at outside left, scored the only goal.

Lewis Wrestles Mahmout.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 27.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, heavyweight wrestling champion, and Yousiff Mahmout, Bulgarian challenger, are scheduled to clash for a finish wrestling match here tonight.

Three other descendants of Colin will be in the McLean string this season, all 2-year-olds, named respectively Codina, Comixa and Cotrompa.

Officials for Bowie Meeting.

A complete list of officials for the Bowie meeting, that opens April 1, has been announced with Joseph A. Murphy of St. Louis, J. H. Anderson and Edward Tribe as judges and with George T. Millersas starter. Stewards will be Herman P. Conkling, George Brown Jr. and Baker Walters. Joseph McLennan will be handicapper and clerk of the course, John T. Turner, clerk of the scales, and William Jennings, timer. Romy Beggs, William Doyle and Charles J. Meiser will be paddock and patrol judges.

Dam of Tracery Is Dead.

Topiary, dam of the great race horse Tracery, died recently at August Belmont's nursery stud near Lexington, Ky. The mare was foaled in England in 1901 and was bred by Sir Tatton Sykes. Tracery, by Rock Sand, was one of the best horses of his day and won $104,055 in his two years on the English turf.

New Colt for August Belmont.

August Belmont some months ago purchased the grey mare La Chananeene from Quentin Preece and, as she was in foal to Troutbeck at the time, horsemen were curious to see whether the foal would perpetuate the color of his dam, now practically extinct on the American turf. The foal, however, which arrived last week, is a good looking bay. La Chananeene is of French descent and is by the famous sire Le Samaritaine, one of the famous family of grey racers that has produced Rol Herode, The Tetrarch, Tetratema, now the fastest sprinter in England, Caligula, winner of the St Leger of 1920, and many others, all of a grey color. A representative of the family is now on the Coe ranch in Wyoming in the shape of Herodias, by The Tetrarch. She was bred to Harmonicon last year.

The Dinner Jacket— and now the Dress Jacket

And now the dinner jacket has a day-time companion, the dress jacket.

It is a formal coat without a tail, worn with striped trousers—formal and proper, but vigorous and manly.

On Easter day you may expect to see the well-dressed man wearing a dress jacket. For a custom tailored dress jacket is a garment of distinction.

UNION PACIFIC SYSTEM — THE OVERLAND ROUTE

Summer Fares much lower

FARES this summer via the Union Pacific System will in many cases be more than 25% below those of last year. The war tax is abolished, and the cost of round trip tickets from St. Louis to many western summer vacation regions is only about one-tenth more than the regular one-way fare.

Plan now to visit the wonderlands of the West via the Union Pacific. New descriptive booklets are ready. Write for those covering the regions you wish to visit. They're free, and give you a world of advance information which you will find valuable.

Among resort regions reached by the Union Pacific System are the following:

The Colorado Rockies	Salt Lake City—Great Salt Lake
Rocky Mountain Nat'l (Estes) Park	Zion National Park
Yellowstone National Park	North Rim of Grand Canyon
Los Angeles, San Francisco, Yosemite	Bryce Canyon, Cedar Breaks
Portland, Tacoma and Seattle	Idaho Mountain and Lake Resorts
Puget Sound and Alaska	Ranier and Crater Lake Nat'l Parks

Reduced fares to California and the Pacific Northwest become effective May 15th,—to Colorado, Utah and Yellowstone, June 1st. All return limits, October 31st.

LOSSES GENERAL IN LESS ACTIVE STOCK MARKET

Bonds Rule Steady—Foreign Exchange Rates Down With New Low on German Mark—Rediscount Rate at Atlanta Reduced.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"With trading somewhat less active, stock prices again reacted under selling pressure. Speculative sentiment paid less attention to the encouraging aspects of the situation and seemed more disposed to take account of our labor and congressional troubles. Although the afternoon brought some recovery from the low prices of the morning, fractional losses were common throughout the list. Bonds, however, continued steady and the Liberty issues were distinctly strong.

"Call money opened at 4½ per cent and was reduced to 4 per cent early in the last hour. A dispatch from Atlanta meanwhile brought the news that the Federal Reserve Bank there has reduced its rediscount rate from 5 per cent to 4½. This follows similar action by the Chicago Reserve Bank on last Friday. The action of these banks suggests two possible contingencies. One is that lower discount rates than at interior centers may increase the supply of loanable funds at New York. The other is that these reductions may pretage a lowering of the official rate by the New York bank.

Exchange Market Lower.

"Quietness continued in the foreign exchange market with prices showing a tendency toward heaviness. Sterling took its lead from London, where the quotation declined to $4.37¼ before our opening, and sold as low as $4.36⅝. After rallying ⅜ of a cent, the net loss on the day amounted to 1 cent. German marks meanwhile dropped to another low record, offerings being made at 0.20¼ of a cent. A recovery of half a point reduced the day's loss to 1¾ points. French francs lost 4 points to 8.99 cents and most of the other continentals showed similar declines. Taken altogether, the market's behavior was consistent with a wait and see attitude with regard to the next move in the reparations negotiations.

Wheat Lower, Rallies.

"With the news from New England detailing the progress of the textile strike there and with the likelihood of the wage reductions spreading further in that territory, cotton continued dull and reactionary. The declines were not, however, large, and many, after selling off 17 points to 17.50 cents had recovered 10 points toward the close. Wheat was sold generally heavy at the start. The May future slipped back 2¼ cents to $1.28 which is a new low for the recent reaction. At this point, however, it became evident that the technical position had been considerably improved on the decline and a smart rally ensued. At a late price of $1.32½ May was, in fact, up 1¾ cents on the day. Firmness returned also to sugar prices, Cuban raws commanding 2 7-16 cents."

The Investment Market.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The bond market was affected today by the heaviness of stocks, losses predominating throughout the general list in the first half of the session.

Heaviness was shown by Tokio 5s, Chinese Railway 5s, Swiss 8s, Zurich 8s, Swedish 6s, Mexican 5s and Uruguay 8s.

Numerous speculative rails and industrials were lower by fractions to 1½ points. Seaboard Air Line adjustment 5s reacting most sharply with Chicago Northwestern 5s and Atlantic Fruit 7s.

Liberty issues were firm and French 7½s, Mexican 4s and City of Bergen 8s were better by fractions to 1 point.

Similar gains were made by Cuba Cane 7s and 8s, Virginia Carolina 6s, Kansas City Terminal 4s and Iowa Central 5s. Local tractions showed strength, notably Third Avenue refunding 4s and adjustment 5s, Interborough Rapid Transit 5s and Public Service of New Jersey 5s.

Bonds revived little benefit from the partial recovery of stocks, the tone of Liberties and other active issues remaining uncertain, at the close.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 27.—All the markets today felt for a time the force of reaction from the active speculative movements of the past month.

On the Stock Exchange the downward turn had manifested itself plainly on Saturday. The bond market today was an exception. It still sustained well up to the best prices of the year by the easy condition in the market for fixed date loans. It ignored last week's little upturn in call money, because it was well understood that Wall Street had dropped its bid lower than was warranted by the price of credit in other sections of the country and that consequently there had to be an equalization.

It would have been hard to link up today's early selling in the share list with any occurrence in the outside news. To say that the impending coal strike was an important influence would have been an obvious misstatement, when the stocks of companies whose earnings would be most affected did absolutely nothing in the market.

The fact that prices went down again in the face of encouraging trade advice simply went to show that the stimulating effect of these shorts had for the time being been discounted by the rise in stocks since the end of January. Speculators who two months ago bought have been taking some of their profits. It was selling of this sort which checked the advance toward the close of last week and brought about further reaction this morning.

But it appeared as the day went on that these realizing sales were not prepared to follow prices down and as soon as this fact became manifest the professionals working on the short side hastened to buy in their contracts thereby causing a rally all through the list.

• • •

The Bond Market.

The steadiness of Liberty loans today was typical of the movement of bond prices. There were no important changes and the entire list appeared to act without regard to outside news. Last Saturday's high records in the foreign Government group were sustained in most instances, although the 8 per cent bonds of the Government of Switzerland and the cities of Zurich and Berne declined rather sharply on realizing sales. Copenhagen 5½s, Rio de Janeiro 8s, Danish municipals and Queensland 6s all reached their highest for the year, and Bergen 8s also were strong. British and French loans were active and firm.

A banking syndicate has sold $1,050,000 City of Philadelphia 4½ per cent, 20 to 50 year bonds, dated March 16, 1922. The $1,000,000 San Antonio, Tex., farm loan bonds, sold at 101½ and interest to yield about 4.80 per cent, were the largest land bank issue and were well taken.

Among the industrials Cuban Cane 7s and 8s advanced about a point. Chile Copper 6s Steel 5s Atlantic Fruit 7s Ajax Rubber 8s and a few of the public utilities including American Telephone and Telegraph 6s working slightly lower. Standard dividend paying railway issues received much less attention than the more speculative rail bonds. Kansas City Terminal 4s were in good demand.

Metals at St. Louis.

Lead was unchanged in St. Louis today at $4.12½ per 100 pounds. [illegible]

Atlanta Rediscount Rate Cut.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 27.—Recent general business improvement was given today by Gov. M. B. Wellborn of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank as the reason for the order further reducing the discount rate from 5 to 4½ per cent. The rate was 7 per cent in January, 1921, and has been reduced progressively since that time.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Coffee, Rio No. 7, 10c; futures steady; [illegible] Dec., 8.20c.

WHEAT PRICES REACT AT CHICAGO AFTER EARLY DROP

CHICAGO, March 27.—Wheat averaged lower in price today during the early transactions, being affected by a decided setback of values at Liverpool. Besides, bears contended that selling was in order until the foreign demand for wheat becomes more urgent or until there is more ground for apprehension as to the growing domestic crop. Support on the declines in price came chiefly from shorts taking profits. The opening, which was unchanged to ⅝c lower, with May $1.30 to $1.30½ and July $1.15⅝ to $1.16, was followed by downturns all around, although interrupted by transient rallies.

Subsequently a decided upturn in prices took place, owing more or less to unfavorable crop advices and to talk of more export buying than was apparent on the surface. The finish was unsettled, 1⅝c to 2⅜c net higher, with May $1.32⅞ to $1.33 and July $1.18⅝ to $1.18¾.

Corn and oats were easy with wheat. After opening ⅝c off to ⅛c higher, May 58c to 58⅛c, the corn market underwent a moderate general fall.

Later the announcement of an unexpected decrease in the visible supply aided an upturn in prices. The close was firm, ⅝c to [illegible] net higher, with May 58⅝c to 58¾c.

Oats started at ⅛c decline to a shade advance, July, 38⅝c to 38¾c, and held near to initial figures.

Lower quotations on hogs tended to weaken provision values.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, March 27.—There were no sales in the local raw sugar market early today but the undertone was firmer and holders were asking higher prices. Spot bids were [illegible] cost and freight, equal to [illegible] for centrifugal, while holders asked [illegible]. Raw sugar futures were firm in sympathy with the steadiness in raws and prices at midday were about 3 points net higher on scattered trade and commission house buying. There were no changes in refined sugar with fine granulated listed at [illegible] to 6.50c and the demand light. Refined futures were without transactions.

Sugar futures closed easy; approximate sales [illegible]; May, [illegible]; July, 2.72c; September, [illegible]; December, 2.93c.

New York Metals.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Copper easy; electrolytic spot and nearby, 12¾; later, 13c. Tin easy; spot and nearby, [illegible]; futures, [illegible]. Iron steady; No. 1 Northern, 18.50; No. 2 Northern, [illegible]18.50; No. 2 Southern, [illegible]. Lead steady, spot, [illegible]. Zinc quiet; East St. Louis delivery, spot, [illegible]. Antimony, spot, [illegible].

LOW PRICE ISSUES FAIRLY ACTIVE ON CURB MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Low-priced issues were fairly active on the Curb Exchange today and held well, but the high-priced stocks at times were under pressure. For the first time in several weeks there was indications of liquidation through commission houses. These were sellers on balance. Considerable interest was shown in Alpha Mines, which was listed and traded in for the first time. Acme Packing continued a favorite. Sterling products met realizing sales, but after yielding nearly 2 points there was a rather sharp recovery.

The motor shares were easier and declines occurred in Libby, McNeill & Libby, Eastman Kodak and Goldwyn Pictures. Gillette Safety Razor was an exception, as it was comparatively firm on moderate transactions.

With one or two exceptions, price movements were narrow in the oil department. Cities Service oil common went down several points, but rallied later. Small losses were shown in Maracaibo and Kirby Petroleum. Mutual Oil sold around its previous high before profit-taking caused a reaction.

IRREGULAR PRICE RANGE TO COTTON AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 27.—After a somewhat irregular opening with first prices 8 points lower to 1 higher, the cotton market improved rapidly and sold above Saturday's closing on commission house buying, which was influenced by rains in the Eastern belt. There was also support from Wall street and Japanese interests. Unfavorable New England strike news and weakness at Liverpool with New Orleans selling eventually checked the rise and carried May off to 17.61c and July to 17.03, or 6 to 12 points below Saturday's close.

Around midday Wall street and the West became heavy sellers of July, while the trade bought on a scale down. May contracts declined to 17.50c, or 17 points under Saturday's close, but met a good demand around this level, partly from local shorts. The heaviness in grain had much to do with the Western selling.

Slight rallies occurred in the afternoon on support from both trade and speculative interests. Very little spot news was received from southern markets and hedge operations throughout the day were small.

Spot cotton quiet; middling, 17.80c.

Cotton futures closed steady. May 17.64c; July, 17.06c; October, 16.71c; December, 16.65c; January, 16.56c.

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—Spot steady, 25 points lower; sales on the spot, 574 bales; to arrive, 700; low middling, 15c; middling, 16.25c; good middling, 17.25c. Receipts, 1921; stock, 234,069.

St. Louis Spot Cotton.

Spot cotton was unchanged in St. Louis today. Quotations—Good ordinary, 13c; low middling, 15c; middling, 17c; good middling, 18c; middling fair, 19c.

Flaxseed.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 27.—Flax—No. 1, $2.49 to $2.54.

DULUTH, Minn., March 27.—Flax seed, $2.50½@2.52½.

Cotton Seed Oil Close.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The cotton seed oil market closed weak; prime summer yellow, 11.50c; March, 11.50c; April, 11.50c; May, 11.65c; June, 11.45c; July, 11.42c; August, 11.44c; September, 11.39c; October, 10.74c. Total sales, 64,000.

Paris Market Better.

PARIS, March 27—Prices improved on the Bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 56 francs 75 centimes; exchange on London 48 francs 64 centimes; 5 per cent loan, 78 francs 95 centimes. The dollar was quoted at 11 francs 11 centimes.

TEMPTOR CO. STOCKHOLDERS ORGANIZING COMMITTEE

A "protective committee" is inviting holders of Class A stock of the Temtor Corn and Fruit Products Co. to deposit their holdings with it for representation in any plan of reorganization of the company which may result from the present receivership. The committee, composed of Samuel H. Fuller, Paul H. Davis, Hume Lewis and Harry Potter, states to the stockholders:

"Principally on account of the extremely low prices for glucose and its products which have prevailed during the past year, and of the necessity of liquidating a slowly moving inventory acquired or contracted for at much higher prices, the combined operations of the company and of the Best-Clymer Manufacturing Co. have shown heavy losses resulting in a heavy increase in the company's indebtedness.

"It is reported to the committee that the combined current indebtedness of the Temtor Co. and its affiliated, company, the Best-Clymer Co., is approximately $2,578,000, and that the combined current assets of both the companies are approximately $1,886,000. There is a first mortgage of $1,500,000 on the Granite City Glucose Plant, situated at Granite City, Ill., and the other physical assets of the Temtor Corn and Fruit Products Co., the bonds being additionally secured by pledge of a note of the Best-Clymer Co. for $1,000,000 and all of the common stock of that company.

"Unless a plan of reorganiaztion is worked out which takes care of the current indebtedness and provides a substantial amount of new working capital, it is likely that creditors will force a liquidation with consequent loss to the stockholders."

The Granite City plant of the Temtor Corn and Fruit Products Co. which had been operated since May last year with a greatly reduced force, was shut down Saturday night. During the war the plant employed about 700 persons. Recently it has been employing 125.

Printers on Strike Fewer Than 7000.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, March 27.—A resolution favoring the creation of a political party under the leadership and control of the American Federation of Labor was adopted by members of the Boston local, No. 13, of the International Typographical Union, yesterday. This action followed an address by International President John McParland of Indianapolis. He declared that work done toward the establishment of a shorter work day in the printing industry had been so successful that fewer than 7000 members of the union in the country were on the strike payroll.

SOKOLOW TO VISIT ST. LOUIS

Nahum Sokolow, Jewish diplomat and journalist, will be met by a committee of 100 headed by Mayor Kiel, April 4, when he arrives in St. Louis for two days of speech-making on behalf of the Palestine movement. A reception will be held at the Delmonte Hotel that night and a Kosher banquet at the Planters Hotel the following night.

Sokolow will be accompanied by Col. John H. Patterson, war-time British commander of the Jewish Legion. The Keren Hayesod campaign in St. Louis for the rehabilitation of the Holy Land will open tomorrow, under the direction of M. J. Slonim, national secretary of the organization. The local chairmen are Gustave Cytron, Judge Moses Hartmann and Rabbi Samuel Sale.

WORLD INDUSTRIAL REVIVAL HINGES ON REPARATIONS SOLUTION

answered. "Reparations have from the start been a political football. They have never been considered from the standpoint of economics and reason. It is up to America to put them on that basis. Put an American on the Reparation Commission—send an American delegation to an international economic conference not rendered meaningless, like the Genoa, by omission of the main issue. After thorough discussion with the Germans themselves, settle once for all the amount they are to pay and then leave it to them to meet the obligation in their own way."

He was asked how large a part he believed the reparation question is playing in the financial and industrial stagnation of the world.

Germany's Part in World.

"The whole revival of industry hinges on it," he answered. "Germany and the Germans had come to play a greater part in the industrial, economic and financial structure of the world than many, perhaps most, of us thought. She had come to be one of the chief business motor forces in Central and South America, Turkey, Africa and Asia. Above all she was the chief organizing and distributing force in the whole vast territory which is called Russia. And when Germany gets on her feet she probably will do more than all other nations combined to bring Russia back again into the economic family of nations."

Once again Baruch carefully disclaimed any personal element in his summing up of the situation.

"I have the greatest sympathy for all concerned," he said. "The situation which is paralyzing the world grew out of European post-war psychology and political conditions, and modified or mitigated by the more detached and reasonable viewpoint of America. I do not criticise Lloyd George. He has undoubtedly been just as reasonable as his people would let him be. The French Government has been just as reasonable as its people would let it be. Even the American Government has been just as reasonable as the American people, who would let it do nothing. That is the attitude which must be changed. America can bring about a productive instead of destructive settlement of the reparations question. Once that settlement is reached and half the world knows where it stands, industry and finance will come back to normal. My own belief is that they will then come back very rapidly. So the restoration of a livable world rests very largely on the promptness with which America recognizes her responsibility and takes the lead in transferring this crucial issue from the field of politics to the realm of common sense and business intelligence."

RED HOT RODS USED UNTIL MAN TELLS OF HIDDEN SAVINGS

Five Men and a Woman Said to Have Escaped With Merchant's $235.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 27.—Sheriff's deputies are searching for five men and a woman, reported yesterday to have tortured with red hot rods, Mike Kapalinch, a storekeeper at Compton, near here, forcing him to reavel the hiding place of his savings, and escaping with $110 in cash and $125 in stock. Kaplinch's condition was serious today, although physicians said he would recover.

The storekeeper staggered into a friend's house, bruised, bleeding and with great welts on his body. Deputies later searched the store and found a note advising Kapalinch to leave $500 at a designated place next Sunday or "suffer the consequences."

MYSTERY MARKS KILLINGS

Man in Crowd, One on Curb and Guest at Party Shot in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Three men were shot to death under mysterious circumstances in New York last night and early today.

Henry Stearn, young chauffeur, walked in a 100th street crowd. A muffled report was heard. Stearn fell to the sidewalk. He was taken to a hospital and died a short time afterward. He had been shot through the side. His clothing was badly burned by powder. An unidentified young man, well dressed, was seen conversing with a smartly attired girl in Madison street. They stood on the curbing. They quarreled, bystanders said, and parted. Then she returned and again talked with the youth. A taxicab drew to the curbing, the door opened and two shots were fired. The woman fled. Two men, supporting between them a lifeless form, hailed a taxicab in Brooklyn. They took James Meany, 18 years old, to a hospital, but he was dead from bullet wounds. The men said he had attended a "social entertainment" with them and gave the names of other persons who were there.

More and Better Light

FOR more than 30 years the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has been a big refiner of kerosene oil.

During all this time there has been a steady improvement in the quality of its product. This improvement has been more marked in the past ten or fifteen years during which time the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has developed methods of manufacturing to eliminate the danger of lamp explosions.

While the kerosene has been improved the devices for using it have remained unchanged.

Recognizing the fact that the users of Perfection Kerosene were unable to get a maximum service from the oil they burned, and realizing that the failure was due not to the oil but to the devices, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) set its experts to work to find a better burner and a more efficient chimney.

These men, working with the manufacturers of burners and chimneys, have succeeded in developing devices which increased largely the efficiency of the oil.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) does not sell lamps. But it believes that the users of lamps should be informed as to how to get the best results from the kerosene they use.

To accomplish this result this Company is distributing sixty thousand of the new burners and chimneys to dealers handling kerosene that they may demonstrate to their patrons how to get the most light from Perfection Kerosene by using appliances correctly designed.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has arranged with leading chimney manufacturers to stamp chimneys made in accordance with the design and specifications with the following trade mark:

This is but one of the many ways in which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) seeks to increase the efficiency of the service it is rendering the people of the territory it serves.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

E. B. C.—Inquire of the Police Department for the information.

JACO.—The sentence: "He is a picture of inertia," is correctly used in this sense.

P. D. Q.—The half-dollar dated 1870 is worth 54c to 55c. The half-dollar dated 1878, S Mint, is worth $1 to $5.

MILDRED.—The set of false teeth has evidently been made in this shade, therefore nothing could change it.

RCFE.—Write the railroad offices or watch the advertisements for information regarding summer camping in the Ozarks.

GWENDOLYN.—Refer to the 1922 World Almanac for the addresses and names of the presidents and secretaries of the sororities.

1800.—We do not find any specific data on the subject, but you can probably receive full information regarding the cost of living by writing the Bureau of Statistics, Labor Department, Washington, D. C.

AL.—The author Edgar Rice Burroughs wrote five books featuring "Tarzan." The titles are Tarzan of the Apes, 1914; The Return of Tarzan, 1915; The Beasts of Tarzan, 1916; The Son of Tarzan, 1917; Tarzan and the Jewels of Opar, 1918; Jungle Tales of Tarzan, 1919.

DECEIVED.—1. The Knutson bill granting relief to soldiers and sailors of the war with Spain, Philippine insurrection and Chinese Boxer rebellion campaign; to widows, former widows and dependent parents of such soldiers and sailors; and to certain army nurses has passed the House of Representatives, but is still pending in the Senate. 2. If the correspondent means that the divorce was secured not from the veteran, but from a subsequent husband, and if the divorce was secured without fault on her part she can secure the pension.

B. M. R.—The National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association was organized April 28, 1917, completed its work and dissolved March 8, 1921. It was replaced by a Board of Trustees of 10 men which is responsible to the International Committee and the International Convention. Address the International Committee, 347 Madison avenue, New York City.

A READER.—The internal revenue collected on distilled spirits for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, was $317,553,687 and the revenue on fermented liquors was $126,285,858. These were collections under a lower rate than that fixed in the Revenue Act of 1918; had the latter been in effect, the amount would have been 50 per cent higher. Treasury experts say that a billion a year could not be collected from the source. The amount yielded by the income and excess profits taxes for the fiscal year 1918 was $2,838,999,894 and for the fiscal year 1920 was $3,956,936,674.

RUTH.—The administrator must file a record of the notes and securities belonging to the estate in the Probate Court.

A SUBSCRIBER.—Send notice of your withdrawal from the firm to the firm's customers and publish once a week for four weeks.

JANE.—A bank account is considered a joint account when it is in the names of both parties and both parties can draw checks against it.

DAILY READER.—The man who was hurt in the auto accident could levy on the account by an equitable garnishment, if he gets a judgment against you.

MATTIE.—The person selling the drug may be fined any sum from $50 to $5000, imprisoned any time up to two years or be both fined and imprisoned.

FRIEND.—If taxes are now delinquent there is no fixed time for payment. The city may sue at any time or it may wait for five years, but your penalties are increasing all the time.

H. H.—The trust companies of the city of St. Louis are chartered by the State of Missouri, but under the Federal Reserve Act, those joining the system come under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board when they become members of the Federal Reserve Bank.

MORENO.—When you made the payment of $1000 on the note you might have had it applied to either principal or interest. If you said nothing when you paid it, and have had no notice as to how the holder of the note applied it, it would be lawful to consider it an interest payment and so take credit in your tax return.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

MRS. H. T.—You should take your child to a physician, there is probably a hernia existing.

A READER.—You should consult a surgeon. There may be an abscess forming or a disease of the bone or its lining, the periosteum.

THANKS.—You do not state and perhaps do not know the extent of the operation you have undergone. We suggest pil. choleric, taken 4 pills night and morning, decreasing the number temporarily if the bowels act too freely.

MRS. S.—We recommend the following for the trouble you describe: Liq. potassae 4 drams, tr. hyoscyami 3 drams, tr. opii camphorat 4 drams, muc. acaciae 1½ ounces, aq. menth. piper. enough added to make four ounces. Take a dessertspoonful after meals.

OBSERVER.—Surgery does not enter into the treatment of diphtheria at the present time, excepting rarely, unless intubation may be called surgery. Death from the disease occurs by reason of systemic absorption of the poison. The only hospitals in which the disease is treated are the city hospital, Isolation Hospital and the Children's Hospital.

COOLIDGE DESCRIBES PARTY'S ACHIEVEMENTS

Vice President Declares First Year Was Marked by Great Reductions in Costs of Government.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The first year of President Harding's administration has been a period of progress, with an almost incredible achievement in economy, Vice President Calvin Coolidge declared in an address yesterday before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

Asserting that public employes had been reduced nearly 60,000, the army by 85,000 and large reductions proposed in the naval forces, all of which were beginning to show in the Government's appropriations and expenditures, the Vice President said:

"Prior to the war the annual appropriations were a little over a billion dollars. For the last fiscal year they were slightly more than five and one-half billions. For the present fiscal year it is estimated that this will be reduced to somewhat less than four billions, and for the next fiscal year, for which appropriations are now being made, there will be a reduction to about three and one-half billions, the interest and payments required for the public debt are about one billion, three hundred and fifty millions. The cost of ministering to the requirements of the Veterans' Bureau is about one-half a billion. The cost of the army and navy is over eight hundred millions, and another quarter of a billion goes into pensions.

"If from present expenditures there be deducted these items that arose from the war and the extra amount now being expended on good roads and the army and navy, the present cost of running the Government would not exceed the prewar cost by more than two or three hundred millions.

"This represents an achievement in economy which is almost incredible."

Lovelorn Woman Deported 4th Time

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—Miss Beatrice Hebert, the Canadian stenographer whose love for William Zinser, manager of a Philadelphia tourist agency, caused her to enter the United States against the mandate of the authorities, was deported last night for the fourth time.

"Save and Get Ahead"

"I try to keep one idea, one viewpoint, in front of me all the time, and I find it has helped me to save and get ahead.

"I look on my account as a means for getting something. I started out with the idea that saving money meant doing without things I wanted, and I didn't get very far, never over $100.

"Now, with the idea of saving to have, and not doing without to save, I find it much easier. Let me say that I have always found the Mercantile a good place to do business."

Today's Flapper No Worse Than "Miss Prim" of Old Is a Jury's 7 to 5 Verdict

She's Even Better, for She Has Poise, Earnestness, Common Sense, Sanity—Her Faults Negligible.

By RUTH SNYDER.

IS the "flapper" and "modern girl" the product of her mother's generation?

Just how much are the parents to blame, or, shall we say to be praised?

For—

Is the girl of today better or worse than her glorious predecessor?

A jury of 12 prominent men and women have voiced their opinions.

Seven to five they stand in favor of "Miss 1922."

The cry rings from all sides, too—North, South, East and West.

Here are the voters and their verdict:

Mrs. Sumner Gerard, sister-in-law of James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany. From Atlantic City comes her challenge:

"Girls of today beat all others."

From Chicago Prof. Frank M. Hunter at a meeting of the superintendent's department of the National Education Association:

"Flapper better than reformer."

From Andover, Mass., Dr. Alfred Stearns, for 22 years principal of Phillips Academy, sends out the dictum:

"Flappers' parents blamed for 'flap.'"

From Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Burgess Johnson, professor of English at Vassar College, proclaims:

"I like the young undergraduates—the whole lot of them. I like their poise, their prevailing common sense and their earnestness of purpose."

From Baltimore, Md., William W. Guth, president of Goucher College, defends:

"The statement of Dr. Alfred Stearns * * * is not true so far as the parents of our own students are concerned."

From New York, but from the lips of a visiting Englishman, E. Phillips Oppenheim, declares:

"The guardians of girls at the present time have become more tolerant in their control of the younger mind."

From Washington, D. C., and from the lips of our Oklahoma Congresswoman, Representative Alice Robertson:

"As mother of today flaps, so will her daughter."

From Lester F. Scott, National Executive of the Camp Fire Girls of America—and therefore a voice from all over the country:

"Frivolity of girls put up to parents."

From Oxford College, Oxford, O., Miss Eleanor N. Adams proclaims:

"College flappers are better than their mothers."

From Ithaca, N. Y., Mrs. G. L. White, Dean of Women at Cornell, says:

"They're the same old girls."

From Washington, Miss Janet Richards issues her statement:

"Mothers no longer take the trouble to instill into their children's minds the fine high ideals of womanhood which were once given them."

Mrs. Margot Asquith, wife of the former Prime Minister of Great Britain, has studied our younger generation and finds:

"They are no worse today than they were 20 years ago."

Of course, the modern girl has been done to death. Recently, the hue and cry have risen to unusual heights. Perhaps it is the climax. At any rate, probably the most recent cries have arisen from the denunciation of Dr. Alfred Stearns of Phillips Academy:

"'Flappers' would not flap if their mothers were not several leaps ahead of them in the art and sons would follow a narrow path if not handicapped by some fathers," he declared.

In reply to his statement, we have the word of two connoisseurs on girls, Burgess Johnson of Vassar College and President Guth of Goucher College. Mr. Johnson says:

"From what I have seen of this present generation of young people, which follows so closely upon my own, I cannot find that it differs in character or purpose or spirit from any other generation. It differs in dress and in codes of behavior. So has each generation differed in dress and in codes from the generation that preceded it. I suppose that every generation of mothers and fathers and uncles and aunts has viewed with alarm these changes. * * * Sweeping generations are usually silly. If you insist that I shall be silly along with the rest of us, let me say that I like the young undergraduates that I see here at Vassar—the whole lot of them. I like their poise, their prevailing common sense and their earnestness of purpose. Their faults seem to me the same as those that existed among the boys and girls of my undergraduate days, but in a far less virulent form and tempered by more maturity of mind and general sanity."

Mr. Guth echoes the sentiments of Burgess Johnson: "There may be exceptions, of course, but after many years of experience in the higher education of young men and women I have not found any tendency among the parents which would warrant the generalization of Dr. Stearns."

So while Congresswoman Robertson denounces: "You can blame the mother. As the mothers flap, so flap the youngsters. She sets the pace and her daughter follows," we have the opinions of others who like the modern girl.

"The modern young woman is more precocious than she was, say, 50 years ago. Today's girl still cherishes deep down in her heart the desire to cook for one particular man, to look after all his wants and fuss over him."—E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"The modern girl is all right," says Mrs. Gerard. "I like her. Neither because of nor in spite of her cigarette smoking, her sloppy galoshes and her roll-down hose. These things are no index to her real character. They are merely passing fancies."

So after all is said and done, shall we take the verdict of these jurymen and jury-women and agree with Mrs. Asquith that "this talk nowadays about the weakening morals of the 'younger generation' is all very silly. They are no worse today than they were 20 years ago, or since time immemorial."

A Loveless Marriage

The Absorbing Story of a Woman's Heart

By RUBY M. AYRES.
(Copyright, 1922.)

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

I HAD dreamed of my honeymoon many times, as girls will. It seemed impossible that I was really experiencing it.

I did not know where Francis was. He and I had quarreled violently at tea; at least he had raved at me, and I had wept. Already I had begun to hate him in deadly earnest. In 24 hours I had grown so wise—so wise that I could look back with unspeakable scorn on the girl who had stood at the altar steps and lightly vowed herself away into this man's hands.

I no longer had one single hope of happiness. I had had my first glimpse of hell, and, unfair perhaps as it was, in my heart I put all the blame down to Richard Tempest.

He was miles and miles away by now, caring little or nothing that I was alone and eating out my miserable heart.

I don't want to sadden you, or I could write of many days and nights and weeks when I wished I could die—when I used to pray to God that I need not go on living.

I believe, if I had had the pluck, I would have taken my own life; but I was too much of a coward. Perhaps the life I had lived had knocked all the spirit out of me; perhaps I had never had much.

We had meant to have a month's honeymoon, but before the end of a week we were back at Nascot House. We traveled up from the little Devon village in separate carriages. Francis made the excuse that he wanted to smoke, but I knew that it was because he was sick of my company.

I suppose I was a little misery in those days. I dare say an older and wiser woman would have made something better of her marriage than I did; but you must remember that I was only 18, and very ignorant.

When Francis swore at me I cried; when he came home the worse for drink I fled from him and locked my door; when he offered me caresses I hated him. At first he used to apologize after he had lost his temper, but he gradually stopped doing that, possibly because he met with such small encouragement.

Things were worse when we got back to Nascot House. Sometimes I hardly saw him for days together.

Occasionally he had outbursts of remorse and affection when he would buy me some extravagant present. Once he took me to an expensive hotel in London for a week, and kept me out every night "sight seeing."

I was utterly worn out when I got back to Nascot House. Francis' idea of pleasure and my own were as far apart as the poles.

WE went on like this for about six months. Our marriage was the talk of the village. I know people blamed my father for having allowed me to marry such a man. Francis knew it, too, and it made him furious.

"You've been whining to some of those chattering fools down in the village!" he accused me. "Let me catch you at it, that's all"——

Here followed a string of oaths.

Then I did make one passionate appeal to him. I felt as if my heart were breaking.

"You told me when I married you that you'd be kind and good to me. You told me you loved me, but I believe you hate me."

He stood for a moment looking down at me with sullen eyes; then——

"I don't know whether I hate or love you," he said. "But you hate me, don't you?"

"You won't let me do anything else," I said hopelessly.

His manner changed then. He went down on his knees beside the chair where I was sitting, and put his arms round my waist, hiding his face in my lap.

"I do love you, Marjorie," he said. "But you rouse the very devil in me! You're so cold. You hate me to touch you or kiss you. I'd lie down and let you walk on me if you'd just be a little affectionate."

I tried to apologize. I said I was sorry.

"I'm afraid it's not in me to be affectionate to anyone," I said. "But I will try."

I kissed him of my own accord, and he kissed me, and for days afterwards there was a sort of affectionate friendship between us. He did not take too much to drink, and I went about with him everywhere I could, and I thought things really were beginning to improve. Then he went up to London "on business," he said, and that was the end of any chance of happiness we might have managed to snatch from the wreck of our marriage.

It was the small hours of the morning when he came home, and I was in bed. I heard the sharp trot of the cob's feet up the road. The groom always knew what train Francis was coming by, and drove to the station to meet him. Then I heard my husband's loud, angry voice, and the slam of a door.

But I have not forgotten. I shall never forget till the day the grave closes over my head.

I did not answer him. I knew by experience that it was useless to try to reason or defend myself when he was in one of these rages. As a rule silence was effective in putting an end to his torrent of abuse, but that night it only seemed to enrage him.

He dragged me out of bed. I believe he would have struck me had he dared.

I DON'T think I should have minded him striking me had I been sure that he would kill me—I only wanted to die—and suddenly, with a spurt of desperate passion, I looked up at him as he bent over me.

"You brute! You brute!" I said, shrilly. "Kill me if you like! I wish you would! I wish you would!"

He was nearly mad then with rage, and suddenly he lifted his clenched fist and struck me.

I don't remember anything more—until I opened my eyes and found myself in bed.

It was daylight. Sunshine was filtering through the half-drawn blinds. I could hear the murmur of voices in the room, but they sounded a long way off, as voices do in a dream.

I tried to raise my head, but it felt like lead, and I fell back again weakly.

Someone crossed the room and bent over me. It was our old doctor, and I am not sure, but I believe there were tears in his eyes as he looked down at me.

I tried to smile, and put out my hand to him.

"Am I ill?" I asked.

I could not think, could not remember; but something in the pitying expression of his face brought last night back to me in an overwhelming flash. I hid my face in the loose sleeve of my nightdress.

"Oh, if I could only die!" I wailed. "I don't want to go on living! If I could only die!"

He sat down beside me on the bed, and held my hand—oh, so kindly.

"Poor child! Poor little girl!" he said, over and over again.

He had known me all my life. It was he they had sent for when my mother was thrown in the hunting field all those years ago.

I burst into a passion of miserable tears.

I don't think any words of mine could ever describe the shame and utter wretchedness in my heart. I was only 18, but it was true that I did not want to live.

"You must not say that," said Dr. Inglis gently. He still held my hand and his fingers tightened their kind grasp. "There's a long life in front of you, please God, and more happiness than you've had yet."

"I don't want a long life," I sobbed. "I'm tired of living. There's nothing to live for."

He did not answer immediately. Then he said gently:

"There will be soon, Marjorie. You are going to have a child."

UNCOMMON SENSE

By JOHN BLAKE.

THE GIFT OF WONDER.

IN his "Outline of History" Mr. H. G. Wells points out that the Romans, in the height of their power, neither knew nor cared what was going on in the world outside the limits of their empire.

Silk and amber and spices came to them from China and the Orient. They concerned themselves only with the prices of these things. How and by whom they were made was a matter of indifference to them.

What manner of peoples were gathering forces in the rest of the world was a subject in which they were not interested.

They cared nothing for geography or astronomy. They did not even investigate the growth of Christianity across the Mediterranean—a force which was soon destined to reform and rule the world.

It was because of this selfish self-concern that Rome fell. The ignorance of its people—including its Senate—was the chief factor in its undoing.

Ignorance is a man's or a nation's own fault. The means of information and of education, which is the collecting of information, are always at hand.

The Romans had great power and abundant money. They could, had they chosen, have studied science and history. Knowledge would have determined for them their own strength. It would have shown them their own perils.

Had they taken the trouble to acquire it, their empire would probably never have fallen.

But so centered were they on their own little affairs—on the petty politics of the Senate, and the intense desire of the rich to profit at the expense of the poor, that they never looked through the windows of their frontiers to see what was going on in the world outside.

So, eventually, forces they knew not how to control overcame them, and their empire crumbled into ruins.

You will find that men, like nations, must improve the gift of wonder which is theirs at birth, if they are to continue to grow.

Indifference to others, callousness to suffering, ignorance of the gathering forces of destruction always precede destruction.

If you are intent only on what you yourself are doing; if you cease to wonder enough at the marvels in the world to study them, you will soon bankrupt your powers, and be at the mercy of the intelligent people about you.

Continue to wonder, and you will continue to study and think. Continue to study and think, and you will continue to learn and grow. And only by learning and by growth can you retain even a comfortable place in this world.

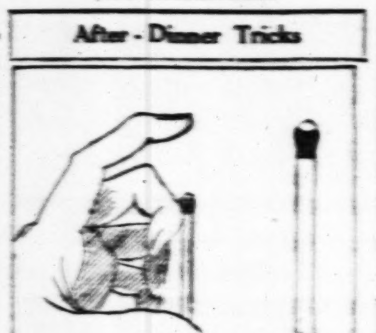
After-Dinner Tricks



No. 73—Balancing a Match.

A MATCH is balanced on the ball of the forefinger.

To accomplish this feat secretly break off the tip of the match at the base. This leaves a number of tiny prongs or slivers of wood. When the match is set on the finger it is pressed against the flesh and the tiny slivers are imbedded very slightly. The match will then stand as long as desired. No one else can do the trick, as they invariably fail to press the match into the finger.

STEAK WITH ONIONS

HAVE two pounds of top round steak, cut thick. With a sharp knife slice the meat into pieces two inches wide and four long. Slice one Spanish onion thin. Butter a casserole dish well and place the onions in the bottom, dust them with a little sugar, pepper and salt and dot generously with butter. Dust the pieces of steak with flour and lay them on top of the onion. Put in two cupfuls or more of potatoes cut into balls by a cutter. Turn over all enough well seasoned, slightly thickened, smooth tomato sauce to cover the dish, and cook in the oven for three-quarters of an hour.

Oyster Savory With Rice

TAKE one green pepper, one peeled onion, one-third cup butter, three-fourths cup rice, two and one-half cups stock, four tomatoes peeled and seeded, one teaspoonful salt, one pint or one quart of oysters. Plunge the pepper in boiling water and with a towel remove the thin skin. Chop the pepper and onion fine, then cook in the butter until yellow. Put the rice in a casserole with the onion, pepper, stock, tomatoes and salt, and stir occasionally until the rice is nearly tender. The cooking should be done in a moderate oven. Stir the oysters into the rice in the casserole and let cook about 15 minutes. Half a dozen slices of bacon may be used instead of butter if desired.

The Weekly Health Talk

By DR. MAX C. STARKLOFF,
Health Commissioner of St. Louis

DISEASE germs ordinarily live but a very short time when they are exposed to air and sunlight. They are parasites and must have something or somebody to live on, else they die; consequently most diseases are transmitted from one person to another or from a lower animal, or perhaps from some vegetable to the human family. There are some germs that can live outside of another living creature; for instance, the germ of lockjaw may live for a long time buried in the earth or on metals that are not exposed to the air. Hence it is that people get lockjaw from rusty nails, or from working around places where they are injured and come in contact with something that has been hidden from the atmosphere; but these germs cannot live in the open air. However, the germs of nearly all diseases that affect mankind are transmitted to him from another human or from some other live organism. Malaria and yellow fever are instances of germs that are transmitted to man through insects. These diseases cannot be contracted by the human except through the bite of a mosquito. Yellow fever is practically now extinct in the United States and almost entirely eradicated from the world because we found the source of infection and destroyed it. Malaria, however, we still have with us, not so much in St. Louis but a great deal in the southeastern part of the State, where mosquitoes still exist in large numbers.

The most frequent source of disease, however, is man himself, and he transmits it to others, either directly, through coughing, sneezing, close contact, or through the medium of books, pencils, clothing and other objects that have been handled or come in contact with the diseased person.

This knowledge of the source of infection has been developed after fond years of study on how disease is spread and following it through until the original source of the disease had been found.

At one time in the early days of the science of bacteriology it was believed that patients received infection from organisms that had developed in and were received from the patient's surroundings; in other words, it was thought that such organisms were derived from decaying or dead organic matter. We now know that the bacteria which cause disease, what are called pathogenic bacteria, are very highly parasitic and must have another being to feed and live upon before they can develop the toxins that cause disease. Outside of a living body these pathogenic bacteria soon die.

The sources of infection have been classified by scientists as follows:

(a) Typical cases—These are individuals in whom the disease is present and the patient shows the usual signs of sickness.

(b) Atypical cases—These are individuals in whom the signs of the disease are indefinite and no positive diagnosis of the real condition can be made. The illness also is usually mild in such cases. It is frequently necessary to make a bacteriological examination before the diagnosis can be arrived at in these cases.

(c) Carriers—These are of several kinds; they are apparently healthy persons who harbor the organisms of a communicable disease and discharge the organisms from their bodies.

1. Incubatory carriers, that is, persons who are in the incubation stage of an infectious disease and will soon show the characteristic symptoms.

2. Healthy carriers are individuals who never show clinical signs of the disease, the germs of which they harbor in their bodies.

(d) Convalescent carriers. These are persons who have recovered from an attack of the disease but who continue to harbor the infective agent. These convalescent carriers are divided into two groups:

(a) Temporary carriers are convalescents who can carry and distribute infection for three months.

(b) Chronic carriers are those convalescents in whom the infective agent persists for a period longer than three months.

These are facts that have been learned through long experience in the treatment of disease and the search for the source of infection of communicable diseases. The Health Department believes that the people will co-operate intelligently if they know something about these conditions and use special care against infecting others.

Fashion News Notes

NEW YORK.—A Fifth avenue shop is featuring extreme simplicity of material and line in underthings for young girls. They include the chemise of batiste without gathering or ruffle edge, however, with real Val lace. A handmade batiste nightgown is permitted a V-neck flanked by little groups of tucks; a batiste envelope chemise has the neck edged with real Val and the hem edged with a narrow net ruffle. Even for the young girl, the breakfast coat is a splendor of ruffled crepe meteor, or taffeta, in ciel, rose, peach, coral, or pale orchid, with a two-tone satin ribbon girdle.

LAKEWOOD, N. J.—A smart black pump seen here and meant for street wear has elastic inserts on the side and four narrow leather straps. The straps were without buttons, the elastic stretching when the shoe was slipped on and tightened automatically afterward to hold the shoe in place. The heel was moderately low and the whole effect chic as well as comfortable.

PARIS.—Blouses become more and more fantastic. The jacket blouse is now in high favor. It combines the old-time basque with the short suit jacket of, say, the late '90s, the kind with a short, full bit of pleating at the waist line in back. One blouse jacket is of green, white and black striped silk, with a high stand-up collar, revers, three buttons in the front; the full bit of pleating around the waistline, ending each side of the front, and side pockets. The sleeve of this remarkable and snappily tailored creation are white mousseline de soie.

NEW YORK.—It is no longer the exclusive privilege of the telephone to hide behind the skirts of a pink and white china doll. One's powder puff, hair pins, nail file, handkerchief, small change purse, keys—in fact all the myriad things that lurk in a woman's handbag—may hide behind wide and brilliant doll skirts now. A doll's head forms the top of her handbag and a creamy, puffy, silk gown does the rest.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Two Happy Bears

By Thornton W. Burgess

A stomach filled; desire gained—
Thus happiness is oft attained.
—Old Mother Nature.

IN all the Green Forest and on all the Green Meadows the happiest little people to be found anywhere were Boxer and Woof Woof, the two little Bears. Where were they? They were in Farmer Brown's sugar house. You know that if there is anything a Bear will run almost any risk for it is sweets. No boy or girl ever longed for candy as a Bear does for anything sweet. And here in Farmer Brown's sugar house was more sweetness than Boxer and Woof Woof had dreamed could be in all the Great World.

Boxer had discovered a big pailful of soft maple sugar. With one arm around that pail, he sat down and began to scoop that sugar out with his other paw and cram it into his mouth as fast as he could. Never in all his life had he tasted anything so good. This is what he was doing when Woof Woof entered.

Of course, Woof Woof made straight for Boxer and that pail of sugar. But Boxer had no intention of sharing that sugar with anyone. He was selfish. Yes, sir, he was selfish. The instant Woof Woof came near enough Boxer, still holding fast to the pail of sugar with one paw, cuffed her across the face with the other. Instantly Woof Woof lost her temper and struck back. Now, Woof Woof had both paws free, while Boxer had one arm around that pail of sugar. Over he went on his back, still clinging to the pail of sugar. Out poured the soft, sticky sugar all over him.

Woof Woof promptly began to eat it as rapidly as she could lick it up. Boxer scrambled to his feet and right away they forgot about heir quarrel. Both licked up that spilled sugar as fast as they could make their tongues go.

When the sugar was gone they began to look for more. It was Woof Woof who discovered that the evaporator was half full of syrup. The sugar had been good, but that syrup smelled better. She plunged an eager little nose into it. Then things happened.

"Wow! Wo-o-w! Oh! Oh!" yelled Woof Woof, and tore around that sugar house as if she had suddenly gone crazy. Everything that could be upset she upset. Everything that could be knocked down she knocked down. You see, that syrup was still hot.

Boxer had been at the other side of the sugar house when this happened and he didn't know what to make of it. Being naturally curious, he went over to the evaporator himself. His eyes sparkled greedily when he smelled that syrup, and without waiting an instant, he did exactly what Woof Woof had done. Of course, he fared no better than Woof Woof had fared, and with squeals of pain and rage he, too, began to race around. Finally he found the door and bolted out. His nose and his mouth smarted and he made straight for a little pile of snow. He plunged his head into this and took a big mouthful. That made him feel better.

Actually neither he nor Woof Woof were badly burned. The syrup had not been hot enough for that. Presently Boxer went back. He found Woof Woof already had forgotten her troubles. In rushing about they had knocked down from a shelf a box and this box had broken open. It had been filled with little cakes of maple sugar. Woof Woof was gobbling these as fast as she could. Boxer promptly joined her and then for an hour these two little Bears were the happiest little people in all the Green Forest.

Maxims of a Modern Maid

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

UNHAPPY marriage usually represents the attempt of husband or wife to collect a tax on last year's passion from this year's shrunken desire.

Marrying is like buying a hat: If you take the first one you like you may see, later, one you would like much better; on the other hand, if you look around too long all the best bargains will be snapped up, including your original choice and you'll wish you'd stuck to it.

The woman who wants to be popular keeps on leash her sense of humor, letting it run just far enough to catch the jokes a man tells and sternly forbidding it to get its teeth into the joke he IS.

It may be "the stronger sex," but—as every woman in an office knows—it can't stand having a window open within 100 feet of its cowering, bald head.

A thought for today's flapper: The proof of the party is in the petting.

Match-making mammas of yesteryear used to investigate a young man's pedigree. Nowadays all that really interests them is the make of his car.

When a woman has made her husband miserable with jealous suspicions and they are proved unfounded, she is not in the least repentant. She goes on the principle that if Tommie was licked when he didn't deserve it, he deserved it plenty of times when he didn't get it.

When a man assures a woman that she is the sort to whom he can tell anything, if she be wise she will answer promptly, "Don't!"

Sometimes a woman is blind to her husband's disloyalty, sometimes she merely shuts her eyes.

APRICOT WHIP

ONE-HALF pound dried apricots. Three-fourths cup sugar, three egg whites. Wash the dried apricots thoroughly and soak for two hours in water enough to cover well. Cook the fruit at simmering temperature in the water in which it was soaked. When very tender remove from the fire and rub through a sieve; add the sugar and cook for 5 minutes. The mixture should be the consistency of marmalade. Beat the egg whites until light, fold in the apricot mixture, and pile lightly into attractive tall glass dishes. Serve with custard sauce.

Old Judge COFFEE Settles the Question

THE MERRY JOURNEYS of MARY JANE

He told Mary Jane all about the elves and the fairies and about the moonlight night in June.

Mary Jane and the Gay Little Elf

ONE evening Mary Jane took a long walk away into the forest to meet Fairy Goldy-Shoes or Mr. Sly, the fox, or some of the folks that live over that way. But all of a sudden she saw a little elf.

He was only about an inch and a half high, dressed all in green, and he carried a little umbrella in his hand, for elves are always very particular not to get their clothes wet.

The little elf said "Hello, Mary Jane, where are you going?" Mary Jane said she was going over and try to see Mr. Sly. This little elf, whose name was Chłupsa Chmielewski, told Mary Jane it was no use to see Mr. Sly, because Mr. Sly never ate anything but spinach and radishes at that time of the year.

Then he sat down and told Mary Jane all about the elves and fairies. And he invited Mary Jane to come and dance with him the next revel they would hold. And Mary Jane said she would, and she would bring some delicious Mary Jane Syrup, and sliced bread with her as a treat for all the little elves and their friends, the fairies.

Then Chlupsa Chmielewski stood on one hand and wiggled his feet and opened and shut his umbrella three times, which is the way the elves always do when they mean to say good bye. And Mary Jane went home, where her mother had some delicious golden brown pancakes with lots of rich Mary Jane Syrup on them.

MY FAVORITE STORIES
By IRVIN S. COBB

QUESTION: HOW FAR DID GEORGE GO?

THE white man—so the story runs—was named Ferguson. He owned a string of two-room frame cottages and his tenants exclusively were colored. Very great was his chagrin when a negro man in a fit of pique cut a woman's throat in one of his houses so that she bled to death, leaving a large dark stain on the floor, because immediately the word spread among the black population that the building was haunted and thereafter nobody would rent it, even at reduced rates. For months the cottage stood empty. Then the owner had a bright idea. He went one evening and hunted up a large dark individual named George Titus, upon whom, by way of beginning, he conferred a drink out of a bottle of corn spirits.

"George," he said, "these darkies tell me you know quite a lot about h'ants and ghosts and such things."

"Well, suh, Mist' Ferguson," replied George, modestly, "I does know a right smart 'bout sich."

"That's good," said the wily white man. "I'm rather an authority myself on such matters. Now, then, speaking as one expert to another, I want to tell you that gun-barrel shack of mine out here on Clay street, where that woman was killed, is not haunted. She died in a state of grace and her spirit rests in peace.

"But the trouble is that these colored people around this town don't know it and they've given the place a bad name. What I want to do is to prove to them that it's not h'anted. And here's the way we're going to do it—you and me. I'm going to hire you to spend tonight in the room where the killing took place. Then, when you come out tomorrow morning and tell your people that nothing happened there during the night, I'll be able to rent the house again. I'm going to give you the rest of this bottle of liquor now and a fresh bottle besides. And tomorrow morning I'll hand you a $10 bill. How about it?"

That slug of corn whisky already was working. It made George valiant. Besides, a white man had appealed to him for professional aid. He consented—after another lusty pull at the flask.

The crafty Ferguson took no chances. Straightway he escorted his newly enlisted aid to the house of tragedy; provided him with a pallet on the floor and left him there in the gathering darkness. But before departing he took the precaution of barring the two windows from the outside and securely locking the front and rear doors.

Next morning bright and early he came to release his brother expert. The windows still were shuttered, the doors still fastened tight; but the house was empty. Also, it was in a damaged state. At one side the thin clapboards were burst through, as though a blunt projectile traveling at great speed had struck them with terrific force from within. The shattered ends of planking stood forth encircling the jagged aperture in a sort of sunburst effect.

Upon a splintered tip of one of the boards was a wisp of kinky wool. Upon a paling of the yard fence was a rag, evidently ripped from a shirt sleeve. Otherwise, there were no signs of George Titus. He was utterly gone, with only that yawning orifice in the cottage wall to give a clew as to the manner of his departure.

Mr. Ferguson waited all through the summer day for the missing one to turn up. George failed to turn. On the second day the white man gave the alarm. A search party was organized—men on horseback with dogs. Bloodhounds took the trail. They followed it from early morning till late that evening.

Just before dusk, in a swamp 20 miles away, the lead-dog bayed exultantly. The pursuing posse, with Ferguson in the lead, spurred forward.

Here came the missing George. His face was set toward home. It was a face streaked with dust and dried sweat, torn by briers, wet, drawn, gray with fatigue. His garments were in shreds: his hat was gone. His weary legs tottered under him as he dragged one sore foot after the other. He was a pitiable sight.

Yet in the heart of Mr. Ferguson indignation was stronger than compassion. He rode up alongside the spent and wavering pedestrian.

"Well, by heck, you are certainly the most unreliable nigger in this State!" he said. "Here night before last I make a contract with you for a certain job. I leave you in one of my houses. I come there the next morning and not only are you gone without leaving any word, but one side of my house is busted out. And after hunting all over the country I find you here, 20 miles from home, in a swamp. Where in thunder have you been since I last saw you, 48 hours ago?"

"Boss," said George, "I've been comin' back."

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY
By James J. Montague

THE HOUSE PARTY OF TOMORROW.

The license is posted for public inspection:
The censor has taken his place on the floor.
Six sleuths, with rough necks and a ruddy complexion,
And large locust night sticks, are guarding the door.
On all the programs the statute is printed—
The penalties one may observe at a glance:
So strike up the band and let joy flow unstinted!
On with the dance, people, on with the dance!

To whom is the censor so brutally speaking?
It's Millicent Markle, the maiden in blue;
He sternly declares he detected her cheeking:
She's sent to her seat for an hour or two.
Who is it he now is regarding morosely?
It's Mrs. McMoney, the matron in white;
She hugged young Phil Flippit a little too closely,
And can't have a partner the rest of the night.

Still joy's unconfined and grows gayer and gayer;
A jazzier number the orchestra moans,
But suddenly stops when the saxophone player
Who pulled a cadenza is fined seven bones.
But look at the radiant Annabel Meyers,
She's held by the censor, and turns deadly pale.
Her skirt's not as long as the statute requires,
He calls for the wagon and sends her to jail.

On with the dance, follow forth after pleasure.
No sheep till the milk cans are rattling outside!
But always remember to step to the measure
The men at the capital make and provide.
No neck-to-neck stuff, or unseemly gyrations,
No steps that the lawmakers look at askance;
Be joyful; but always observe regulations:
Conform to the statutes—and on with the dance
